From Russia Satellite Wants Land Back

VIENNA (AP)—A former Romanian territory that Stalin seized during his brief alliance with Hitler appears to be a new trouble spot in strained relations between Romania and the Soviet Union.

Dispute of Reds:
Bukovina, Bessarabia

Diplomatic sources reported that the Romanians have told Moscow they would like to have Bessarabia back or at least autonomy for its Romanian population.

TRIGGER DISPUTE

The issue is said to rank high in the secret talks between Soviet leaders and the visiting Romanian premier, Ion Gheorghe Maurer, who went to Moscow more than a week ago on what was described as a friendly visit.

Diplomatic sources feel that the timing of the Romanian demand may trigger a border dispute involving the two neighbors at the height of their differences over economic integration.

Polish Trip Planned For Talks on China

MOSCOW (UPI)—Premier Khrushchev will journey to Poland next week for strategy talks with his chief Communist allies in the increasingly bitter ideological struggle with China. Tass confirmed that the visit would take place to mark the 20th anniversary of Poland's Second World War liberation from the Nazis, on July 22.

Top-Level Soviet Shuffle Sees Brezhnev Moving Up

MOSCOW (AP)—First Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan will soon replace Leonid I. Brezhnev as Soviet premier, informed Soviet sources said Tuesday.

Brezhnev, a likely successor to Premier Khrushchev, was reported being relieved of the ceremonial title of president so he can concentrate on his key jobs in the Communist party, the source of power.

PRESIDENT SOON

Mikoyan, an old Bolshevik high in the party and government since early in the Stalin era and now a confidant of Khrushchev, will become president in the next few days, the informants added.

The sources said the changes will be announced within the next few days at a joint session of the Supreme Soviet, the country's parliament, now in summer session in the Kremlin.

SKEPTICISM

Another report, received with more scepticism, said Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko will

Brezhnev

Mikoyan, 68, Khrushchev's travelling troubleshooter, has asked for easier work than his present position as a first deputy premier, one well-informed diplomat said.

TOO BUSY

Brezhnev, 57, has been too busy lately to attend to many of the protocol requirements of his presidential role.

But the large, solidly built Communist has been very busy with party affairs. He is both a member of the presidium of the party, which guides it, and a secretary of the party's central committee.

HEIR APPARENT

Brezhnev now is widely assumed to be the heir apparent of the 70-year-old Khrushchev. But some observers do not overlook the name of Nikolai V. Podgorny, who also became a party secretary in June, 1963 or the possibility that an outsider might emerge.

Somewhat aloof-looking and a metallurgist by profession, Brezhnev has a common touch but lacks the folksy friendliness of Khrushchev.

Fire Kills 18 Firemen

TOKYO (AP)—Fire and explosions ripped through warehouses in a reclaimed industrial district in southern Tokyo Tuesday night, killing 18 firemen.

One fireman was reported missing and 45 other people were injured.

Negroes Condemn Platform

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Negro Republicans attending the 1964 convention issued a "statement of principles" Tuesday night supporting Gov. William Scranton and condemning the "lily white" GOP platform.

They said they would stay in the party but would not support Sen. Barry Goldwater if he is the party standard-bearer.

GOP Will Never Be Same

By RICHARD WILSON
SAN FRANCISCO — Winds of change have shaken the Republican party. It will never be the same again.

Personalities who have dominated it for 30 years and more and who, on the whole, have tried to hold it to the middle course, are gone, forgotten or merely symbolic relics of a former time.

Nothing illustrates this more than a little reflection on who would be secretary of state in a Goldwater administration. Who would be secretary of defence? Who would be the chief advisers in a Goldwater-occupied White House? Or, in a Scranton administration for that matter? Scranton is so new as to be virtually unknown in the GOP organization. "I hardly know Bill," Senator Everett Dirksen once said.

The truth is that the country as a whole "hardly knows" anybody in the Goldwater organization, either. There are a few whose names have become known — Governor Fannin of New Mexico; Denison Kitchel, the campaign manager; a hot-eyed and hard-headed 40-year-old Harvard man named Richard Kleindienst; Dean Burch, 35-year-old Goldwater executive assistant; Clifton White, 45-year-old former college professor.

Also there are a few journalists: Bill Buckley, the fast-talking editor of the National Review; Russell Kirk, conservative lecturer and writer; Mike Bernstein, Bill Seward and other congressional investigation types; Ed Nellor, former newsman and one-time employee of radiocaster Fulton Lewis; Tony Smith, former newsman; Brent Bozell, one-time ghost-writer for the

Foes Crushed

BARRY WINS FINAL TESTS

SAN FRANCISCO (CP)—The right-wing forces of Senator Barry Goldwater easily crushed all five attempts by supporters of Governor William Scranton to water down the pro-Goldwater Republican Party platform in a convention floor battle and adopted it without change early today.

Thus the stage was set for the nomination of Goldwater, the Arizona conservative, as the Republican party's candidate for president in the national convention balloting scheduled to night.

Four of the proposals to change the platform were pushed by Scranton and his backers and were rejected by the convention delegates Tuesday night.

The fifth, which would have called for state, local and private action in behalf of civil rights, was offered by Governor George Romney and other Michigan delegates.

Two others dealt with what sponsors called political extremism.

Dies at 75

Board chairman of East Asiatic Co., which has interests in mills and other big lumber holdings on west coast of Vancouver Island, Prince Axel of Denmark died of pneumonia Tuesday night at 75. He was brother of late King Frederik VIII.

Islander Killed

FAIRFAX HILL, Sask. (CP)—Michael Connelley, 16, of Port Alberni, B.C., was killed Tuesday when a tractor he was driving overturned near this community 24 miles north of Regina. The accident occurred on a ranch owned by his grandfather.

Mountain Peace Broken

KYRENIA (CP)—Prolonged heavy firing Tuesday broke a protracted quiet spell in the Kyrenian mountains of Cyprus as Greek-Cypriot forces made an apparent bid to cut a major Turkish-Cypriot supply line.

UN officials were understood to be seriously concerned about developments around Temblo and in the mountain areas immediately to the south. The area is under the supervision of Canadian forces.

One Casualty

Chaos Reigns In 'Palace'

Victoria lawyer Brian Smith is in San Francisco to attend the Republican national convention as an observer for the Young Conservatives of Canada. This is how he sees the convention.

By BRIAN SMITH

Monday the convention opened at the Cow Palace—an enormous hangar about three times the size of the Victoria arena.

The main floor of the Cow Palace acts as a crude parliamentary floor for the convention. Facing the elevated rostrum are the rows of seats for the 1,308 voting delegates arranged in blocs under their state banners.

This convention floor area looks like a gigantic stock exchange. Delegates and alternates roam between state delegations, read newspapers, or carry on their individual press conferences.

We could look down from our seats in the gallery tonight and see Jackie Robinson arguing with Louisiana delegates. On another part of the floor, Barry Goldwater Jr. was vainly trying to elude an ABC television cameraman.

A group of Puerto Rican delegates was trying to hoist its banner in front of television cameras and there was at least one camera casualty when two newsmen crossed cables and collided. All the time this is going on, governors, congressmen and lists of routine speakers drone away to an unlistening audience.

I am sure that the press representatives here and their legion of technical assistants must outnumber the delegates and the press has been given almost as much space on the Cow Palace floor as the delegates. The three major American television networks have enormous operation units at the Cow Palace and provide lounge areas for delegates.

We have seen Huntley and Brinkley wandering about and we noticed George Gobel on display at the Xerox Centre where he appears to be advertising copying machines.

Our own CBC has a small but talented operation in a cubby hole at the Cow Palace which is ably manned by James Minifie and Knowlton Nash. The CBC people have been kind to us.

The American convention is a parliamentary-type body which meets only once in four years for a period of one week. This means that delegate continuity between conventions is not great.

In our country most national party conventions are held annually or every two years so that a group of perpetual delegates can more easily dominate the convention.

These convention differences between our two countries help to explain why the Goldwater forces have been able to win such full control of this convention in a period of four years.

The old eastern Republican forces, so long in control at these conventions, are today, a dispirited minority.

Tuesday night's session of the convention has given us General Eisenhower, who delivered a plea for party unity which aggravated no

Martin

OTTAWA (CP) — Would Paul Martin have made a better prime minister than Lester Pearson, the man who beat him for the Liberal leadership in 1958?

The Progressive Conservatives seem to think he would. Twice they have tossed him verbal bouquets this week for his handling of the job of acting prime minister in the absence of Mr. Pearson at the Commonwealth conference.

Mr. Martin has accepted the words as doubtful compliments, unsought if not unappreciated.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker gave Mr. Martin the first bouquet when the government brought in its student loans legislation under an agreement with opposition parties to forego the opening debate. (See story on Page 3.)

"I must say that since the secretary of state for external affairs has been acting prime minister, as a result of his attitude there has been a remarkable improvement in reactions generally," Mr. Diefenbaker remarked in the Commons.

Conservative House Leader Gordon Churchill followed this up Tuesday by asking Mr. Martin:

"In view of his steadily increasing authority in the absence of the prime minister, would he use his influence now to have the main (pending) estimates brought before the House for examination?"

By this time, Mr. Martin seemed to think the game had gone far enough. To Mr. Churchill, he said:

"My honorable friend was good enough and generous enough to pay me a lefthanded compliment. But he will not misunderstand me if I say that the authority of whoever is presiding over this House as acting prime minister is, of course, second to that of the prime minister who is now engaged in very important business outside the country."

"I want to make it clear that his authority has been properly asserted and, I am sure, widely respected."

Intellectuals Siding with Kooks late Joseph McCarthy—and conservatives, all.

The National Review is the intellectual incubator, following Goldwater more than guiding him, but still the means of articulation of the conservative idea, and supported by contributors and advertisers with a mission. It was a bit chilling to see a recent issue devoted to Goldwater's rise which contained on its inside front cover a full page advertisement for firearms for the homeowner and sportsman. Bill Buckley doesn't seem to be exactly the outdoor type but he has had a hard time getting the funds to keep his voice of the new conservatism from fading, and some of the true conservatives of today like a squirrel gun handy.

This is the strange part. An intellectual with a keen rationalization of his political position finds himself bedded down with kooks. This is highly embarrassing and hard to explain, especially if you have graduated with honors from the Harvard law school or have been a respected college professor.

One wonders exactly what

Bill Buckley, Dick Kleindienst, and Barry Goldwater have in common with Tom Anderson, a ruling councilman of the John Birch society, Bracken Lee, former Utah governor who wanted to abolish the income tax, and a pleasant but absolutely incredible fellow named Kent Courtney, who is so far right he comes within one degree of making a complete circle.

But the latter were all ground San Francisco whooping it up for Barry, calling for the end of the United Nations and repeal of the civil rights law. They are willing, however, to let up on the campaign against the floodination of water in order to give more time to Goldwater.

All this is incongruous. Seventy or 80 per cent of people generally, if just a plain guess is to be permitted here, are out of sympathy with the kooky side of the Goldwater idea, and another very large percentage either does not know or does not understand the intellectual side of the conservative movement.

But the delegates at San Francisco, or most of them, were impervious to the contradictions implicit in Goldwater's nomination. They knew that they like Barry. They felt he was misunderstood or misrepresented. Some of the older conservatives smarted from a dozen defeats in the past.

Intellectual conservatives knew Goldwater was the best they were likely to get. There were young people, bored by the "bleeding hearts" of the preceding generations, who wanted Goldwater because he seemed to be the embodiment of the free, self-reliant and untrammelled modern man.

It would be a mistake, I think, for liberals and moderates to underestimate the calm resignation with which a great many reasonable conservatives permit themselves to suffer the kooky or wild side of the Goldwater movement. They are doing so because they believe in conservative principles which they will continue to support even if it should mean the loss of the presidential election.

Convention Chaotic

one and in return received a warm ovation.

While Eisenhower spoke to the convention we watched the Congress on Racial Equality marching in front of the Cow Palace. There were several marchers carrying the usual protest banners with one innovation which read: "The Mason-Dixon Line begins at the Canadian Border." We felt this was a little generous.

Also Tuesday night we have heard the new Republican platform being presented by numerous congressmen and party leaders who worked on it. After the platform had been presented the first fun began.

The Scranton forces had mobilized to present a series of amendments in the hope of providing a last-minute embarrassment for Goldwater. We were given a Scranton news sheet which bore the heading "Courageous Men Who Will Speak On Your Behalf To All America Today."

The first of these men was New York's Governor Nelson Rockefeller who called for a platform plank denouncing the extremist groups. He was given a rough time by the delegates and galleries as he conjured up images of secret societies and midnight telephone calls. Goldwater supporters in the gallery produced handkerchiefs. He didn't experience as much difficulty in delivering his five-minute speech however as Diefenbaker and Pearson did in recent election rallies in Vancouver.

Governor George Romney of Michigan gave a much more effective speech on the same theme quoting at great length from Lincoln. It is quite apparent, however, that the delegates will reject these platform amendments as a move to embarrass Goldwater.

Tonight we are attending a Young Republican dance and reception at the Mark Hopkins Hotel to meet Chairman Miller.

Today, the balloting for the presidential candidate takes place. The only question seems to be how many extra votes Goldwater will win on his first ballot nomination.

absurd and dangerous positions.

Party leaders feared the letter would be turned into potent political ammunition by the Democrats in this year's presidential election campaign.

But though Scranton said he didn't see the letter which his staff had written and though he considered the language a bit harsh, he would not repudiate the document.

Scranton continued his battle for the nomination despite unofficial surveys, which indicated Goldwater may have amassed between 750 and 800 delegate first-ballot pledges.

TOTAL 875
Goldwater's expected strength as tabulated by The Associated Press reached 785 by noon Tuesday. That was about four times Scranton's figure and 130 more than the 655 votes required to capture the nomination. Goldwater's own count of his strength was more than 800.

Some Negro delegates and alternates still toyed with the idea of walking out of the convention in the event Goldwater is nominated. One group said the platform's mild reference to civil rights indicated the Goldwater forces would campaign to gain support of white supremacists. Several Negroes described the convention as "rotten," rounding up more delegates and trying to "put my rope" on a few strays. He started in with the Oregon delegation at a caucus.

It was there the senator lamented that Democrats "can do no more damage to me than some Republicans have already done." He had said that before with obvious reference to Scranton campaign tactics.

become Eastern Europe's foremost industrialized nation with the help of strong trade ties with the West. They openly opposed Soviet schemes to assign them a largely agricultural role in a Moscow-controlled integration under Comecon, the Communist Common Market.

The area in dispute covers 19,000 square miles of fertile corn and cattle country known as Bessarabia and the Bukovina.

RETAINED CLAIM

Once part of Czarist Russia the Soviet Union kept alive its claims to Bessarabia. Then in the Second World War, Hitler and Stalin in 1940 agreed to redesign their East European power spheres under a treaty that allowed Stalin to invade Bessarabia.

Diplomatic informants say the Bucharest government complained that the Romanian ethnic group, comprising nearly 65 per cent of a population of about 3,000,000, is worse off economically and socially than the average Soviet citizen.

The Romanian-Soviet frontier in the area is said to be more heavily guarded with minefields and watchtowers than the Soviet borders to the West.

Observers feel the Russians hardly will surrender the territory.

When Cold Sores Break Out Aspirin May Be the Cause

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: For some time I have broken out with cold sores, usually after taking aspirin or similar medicine. I have been told that a smallpox vaccination may end my problem. Is this possible? —A.P.

Yes, sir, very much possible. This is a recognized treatment for recurrent cold sores, although it is not invariably effective by any means.

However, even if it doesn't work it isn't wasted, because we ought to have occasional smallpox boosters, and too many people don't. The immunity doesn't last forever, you know.

Dear Dr. Molner: I'm a pre-diabetic or a borderline case. The doctor did not prescribe insulin, but he said I should lose weight. I've reduced from 137 to 123 and he wants me down to 120.

I guess I'm just afraid to ask, but can I go through life without insulin? Will I always be on a strict diet? I'm worried about my future and my children's. Can they inherit it? The doctor said I probably inherited it from my grandmother. —Mrs. W.W.

You don't say how old you are. When diabetes starts very early (in childhood) it is just about a fixed rule that insulin will be necessary. In milder cases, starting later in life but caught soon, it is often possible to get along well without insulin. Dieting to keep your weight steady at the proper level is the best way of avoiding the need for insulin later. The disease tends to be inherited—more often if there has been diabetes on both sides of the family.

Dear Dr. Molner: Why do I have so much trouble with blisters forming on my feet? Is it caused by something I eat or drink? Sometimes I have to open them with a needle to let the water out. They itch and cause a lot of misery. —F.J.S.

I can't tell from your brief description what they are. If they are ordinary blisters, then your shoes aren't fitting properly. But the itching suggests that you may not be talking about that form of blister, but rather an infection. Some fungus infections raise blisters and itch. A skin specialist or a podiatrist would be best able to tell just what your trouble is, and how to stop it. It's a thankless process trying to do it yourself on a by-guess and by-gosh basis.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is claustrophobia? My 22-year-old son claims to have this disease. What should we do about treatment? —J.G.

It is an abnormal fear of being shut in, or in an enclosed place, such as in an elevator, or a closet, or a small room.

It is psychological, and if your son is genuinely bothered by it, treatment by a psychiatrist is the only method that promises to do any good.

Note to Mrs. O.J.: Only rarely does an ulcer fail to show in the X-ray, but it can happen. (The medication you mention is one of the mild, commonly used tranquilizers.)

Student Loan Bill 'Shabby Stopgap'

In Europe

Barry Not Popular

LONDON (UPI)—European newspapers generally had more harsh criticism Tuesday for Sen. Barry Goldwater.

The Danish newspaper Akteut asked if his nomination would cause "a return to the stupid petty bourgeoisie of the McCarthy era and its fascist-nationalism."

CONFLICT
"The Goldwater platform is said to threaten violent reactionary conflict at home and the breakup of the Atlantic alliance as well as of the Republican party," said the London Times.

The London Daily Mail said "the Grand Old Party of 'responsibility' and 'equality' and 'peace' is about to place its faith in a man who wants to repeal the 20th century," the Mail said.

"TRAVESTY"
In Copenhagen, the newspaper Politiken said that "right from the start in Frisco Goldwater has acted with arrogance and a remarkable toughness, showing uncompromising and extreme points of view."

The British newspaper the Guardian said "the platform program presented to the Republican convention at San Francisco this week must stand condemned as shocking travesty of all the great traditions of a great political party."

OTTAWA (CP)—Spokesmen for the four opposition parties took potshots at the government's student loan plan in the Commons Tuesday, claiming its benefits are more apparent than real.

"Just a start, just a stopgap," Opposition Leader Diefenbaker commented.

"A pretty shabby piece of legislation," said NDP Leader Douglas. "Very largely window-dressing."

Social Credit Leader Thompson said too few university students will be able to get loans.

All three leaders indicated their parties will vote for the measure, however, on the theory that it is better than nothing.

Credit House Leader Gilles Gregoire took a different tack, opposing the bill on the grounds that it invades provincial jurisdiction over education.

Finance Minister Gordon said the government would guarantee bank loans totalling up to $40,000,000 for needy university students in the first year of operation. It would pay interest charges while the student attended university and for six months after.

The loan ceiling would rise automatically by at least $40,000,000 each subsequent year, with larger increases based on the population growth in the 18-24 age bracket.

This would provide enough capital for a $500-plus loan to one student out of every three enrolled in universities.

Mr. Gordon said he hoped that the provincial governments, except Quebec, will consent to administer the federal plan in part by screening student applications and giving out certificates of eligibility to those with good marks and in need of financial help.

Finance Minister Gordon told the Commons later that no province has yet said whether it will participate in the proposed loan plan.

Brazil's Champion Glutton Eats 24 Pounds of Food

SAO PAULO, Brazil—Eduardo Montefuso, a 43-year-old, truck driver, was named the winner of the Brazilian glutton contest after putting away 24 pounds of food at one sitting. Eating at a steady pace, Montefuso consumed 13 bowls of ox tail soup, three plates of macaroni, seven plates of Italian porridge, two plates of salad, a small loaf of bread and a bottle of mineral water. He fell short of his own record of 25 pounds because he had eaten a pre-contest snack of six beef patties, four chicken thighs, coffee, milk, and a loaf of bread.

BAD KISSINGEN, Germany—Joel Brand, 58, who tried in vain to save 1,000 Hungarian Jews from Nazi hangman Adolf Eichmann and then dedicated his life to punishing their killers, died of a heart attack.

VIENNA—Kurt Wiese, 50, former Gestapo man who jumped bail in Cologne 14 days ago during investigations into his alleged wartime murder of 100 Jews, has been arrested in Austria. It was reliably reported.

REGINA—The Saskatchewan CCF party opens its 29th annual convention here today, when speakers will be Woodrow S. Lloyd, party leader and former premier; T. C. Douglas, federal New Democratic Party leader and also a former premier, and Stephen Lewis, NDP member of the Ontario legislature.

NEW YORK—Kruger Daniel's left hand, cut off in a powersaw accident, has been sewed back to his wrist. Doctors say it'll be at least a week until they can tell whether the graft will take.

SANTA MONICA—A petition demanding Judy Garland be deprived of the custody of her two children was removed from the court calendar when estranged husband Sid Luft's attorney Saul Bernard indicated a possible agreement to end the legal battle.

Shotgun Pellets Miss Negro Girl

NORTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (AP)—A shotgun blast was fired into the home of a Negro family Monday night, narrowly missing a 10-year-old girl who was making a sandwich in the kitchen.

Police posted a guard at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Potter.

Lugene Potter said the blast, apparently fired from a nearby road, shattered the window next to her. She was not injured.

NATCHEZ, Miss. (AP)—A campaign is under way here to raise funds to rebuild two Negro churches which were burned out at nearby Kingston early Monday.

"Arson was definitely indicated in the burning," said George Steinespring, assistant Natchez fire chief.

The state fire marshal's office was continuing its investigation of the fires.

ELM CITY, N.C. (AP)—Two young men were arrested after an attempt to burn a Negro church which an integrated group started painting Tuesday despite warnings from the Ku Klux Klan.

Highway patrol Maj. C. R. Williams identified the men as Ronnie Howell, 19, and Kenneth Owens, 21, both of Rocky Mount.

Williams said Howell admitted participation in the attempt to burn the First Presbyterian Church, which has eight regular members.

Fifth Nude Victim Found Near Thames

LONDON (AP)—The nude body of a woman was found on a quiet street along the Thames River Tuesday and police speculate that a modern Jack the Ripper may have claimed another victim. She had been strangled.

The attractive brunette, about 30, was the fifth young woman found slain and stripped along the Thames in the last eight months.

Police believe the killer may be like Jack the Ripper who prowled London's gaslit east end in the late 1880s.

Clamp-Death Doctor Fined $300

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto surgeon Kenneth A. Brown was convicted Tuesday on two of 10 charges arising from the death last fall of patient Patricia Morgan from the effects of a clamp left in her abdomen during surgery.

The 45-year-old doctor, who maintained he was innocent during the unique five-day trial, was fined $300 and costs for a violation of the Ontario Coroners' Act and $50 under the Provincial Vital Statistics Act.

The remaining five charges under the Coroner's Act and two of four under the Statistics Act were dismissed by Magistrate James Butler. The Crown dropped the remaining statistics charge.

Rhodesia's Future

BRITAIN, with a masterly show of diplomacy and responsibility, has met the vexatious problem of Southern Rhodesia's future head on by pledging that the territory will not be granted independence until it is assured African majority rule.

The promise, though far from meeting the Rhodesian African nationalists' demands that the country be handed over to them now or at a specified time in the immediate future, has apparently been sufficient to allay any fears that Rhodesia might be allowed to follow South Africa's example by establishing a minority white supremacist government.

The pledge will also give considerable heart to the majority of white Rhodesians who, not without good reason, fear a sudden take-over of their country by inexperienced, untrained and irresponsible Africans interested not so much in freedom for their people as in licence for their own behavior.

With its promise Britain has also firmly declared that it alone must remain sole judge of just when and how the objective of Rhodesian independence can be achieved. If this declaration of intent coupled with her pledge is honored by all concerned and outside forces cease their unwarranted interference in Rhodesian affairs a just and equitable solution to the Rhodesian question may yet be found.

Meanwhile under the aegis of the United Kingdom, Southern Rhodesia can continue to exist and progress under the constitution legally granted her as an independent colony more than 40 years ago.

Under this constitution Rhodesia was granted all the rights of a self-governing overseas British state except that all legislation affecting the African population, the unalienated land, railways and mineral rights is subject to disallowance by the British government.

Britain's pledge is nothing less than a promise to all Rhodesians—and indeed, to all Commonwealth nations—that Rhodesia will become neither another apartheid-ridden state nor another terror-ridden Congo republic.

Britain along with Rhodesians of both races now have a chance to reconsider the highly idealistic but still workable policy of racial partnership which was drafted some ten years ago as the basic principle for the eventual development of an independent and multi-racial British dominion in Central Africa.

Though in the past extremists of both races crippled the policy and by so doing brought about the disintegration of the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, men with good heart can still make it work. Certainly it is worth another try now the opportunity has come.

Not Even Policemen

MR. PAUL MARTIN, acting as prime minister while Mr. Pearson is in London, has told the Commons that the RCAF is standing by to airlift this country's 1,100-man UN contingent from Cyprus if an emergency arises. The emergency would come if the reported landings of Turkish and Greek troops leads to wider conflict in the Mediterranean island.

This is an anomalous development which under present restrictions points up the weakness of UN intervention on these "brush-fire" occasions to which so much airy lip service is paid. It was an "emergency" which sent the UN force to Cyprus, but as it has happened without the means to do the job asked of it. A similar situation existed in the Congo operations, which saw UN forces buffeted about without authority to retaliate.

The UN force in Cyprus is there in a "police" role, but it is not even geared to carry out this mandate. Police intervention in civilian strife means that the police enforce law and order and take militant action to bring this about. No such latitude is allowed the UN components in Cyprus. They are compelled in effect to tell rival Cypriot factions that "sin is bad" and they should behave themselves.

This is scarcely the way in which the UN can hope to prove itself as an effective instrument in restoring order when it has been invited to do so in the interests of world peace.

It would seem that a new concept will have to govern UN intervention in "brush-fires" if there is to be hope of success. UN forces will have to be equipped with the kind of weapons and military strength, plus the direction to use these, if they are expected to prevent situations they are sent to offset. As it is they are in an embarrassing and even humiliating position of being a "police" unit without the power of policemen.

And evacuation of the Cyprus force, apparently now in the cards, would suggest that in future "brush-fire" operations a different sense of authority must accompany UN intervention if the world body's peace-keeping role is to gain respect and adherence.

Broken Glass

THE CITY PARKS administrator is probably though regrettably right in his suggestion to the Victoria-Saanich beaches and parks committee that it would do no good to post more signs at Beaver and Elk Lakes warning against the smashing of bottles. As he says, anyone boneheaded enough to create such a hazard would be apt simply to ignore the notices. The beaches would have more disfiguring signs and no fewer slashing fragments for unwary feet were this the only action taken.

The parks department does its best to keep the shores free of this menace, according to the administrator, sending a man at once to pick up all the pieces he can find whenever broken glass is reported. But the effort is not completely successful. Nor is it suggested that even increased vigilance and exemplary prosecution and punishment would be the perfect answer.

It seems hardly likely, however, that many bottles are broken and the bits left lying where they fall when the beaches are well occupied. The suspicion hence must be that such smashing as takes place must mainly be the work of late-evening visitors, and one might reach the conclusion that the effort would be salutary if the police were to step up their twilight and after-dark patrols of beaches and parks, not with the idea of spoiling legitimate summer-night enjoyment but at least with the purpose of letting their frequent presence be known.

Thinking Aloud

... of shoes, and ships, and sealing wax.

By TOM TAYLOR

A FRIEND was telling me his RCAF son was home on leave from his air station at El Arish, near the Gaza Strip where some forgotten soldiers of Canada pass their desert days, and when I got back to the office I took leave, perforce, to look at my map.

This is the large depiction of Africa and the Middle East which hangs on my wall and like the men at work outside my window alienates my business affections. I should remove it, really.

But once having hoisted it all the way from the Suez Canal to the farthest El Arish, and what an awful long walk it seemed, mention of this Sinai settlement caused me to examine again the Dark Continent. It isn't dark except in the color of some skins and the sun shines thereon bright and clear. The tag came because once it was unknown, and therefore darkly forbidding. It isn't unknown any longer, as you are well aware, and as the current PM conference in London shows up clearly. But in the context of political struggle it is still forbidding.

Anyway my pedestrian ego was sharply deflated when I measured my "long walk." It took up an inch of map length. And then I put the ruler top to bottom of the deeper length of Africa itself. About 28 inches, no less. By a rough estimate something like 10,000,000 square miles in extent. Nearly three times as large as Canada, which should cause you to pause if you contemplate a trip from Cairo to the Cape.

And by the consternation—a handy big word—of such things I came across a reference to China, less than half the geographical size of Africa but with a bounding population said now to be around 700,000,000 people and being added to every year by almost as many human heads as there are in Canada. Africa itself has ten times the number of people we have in our confederation but it is, of course, split up into half-a-hundred states whose names tingle the exotic glands but make your tongue falter.

What a world we live in, and the three lands mentioned above are but part of the whole. El Arish is but a dot scarcely worth noting except by the chaps who are there.

And all of it, the world, impinging daily on our breakfast tables, hoping as I do that you read the oldest journal on the Pacific Coast as a titbit to your morning menu.

Mind you it's a bit forbidding in itself, and not alone on the once Dark Continent, and Armageddon seems for ever to be just around the corner, but still and all if you want to keep in the swim an atlas and a newspaper provoke some interesting reflections.

My eye has just caught the name Sudan, for instance, and immediately I recall that I haven't seen this country much in the public prints of late. Ever since it tore itself away from the embrace of Egypt serenity to match the native posture seems to have come upon it. This may be simply because it's minding its own business.

A wonderful world we live in, 'tis true, fascinating and varied. And spoiled only because nations don't stick to their home knitting. If they would contain themselves within their own boundaries, leave their neighbors and others to settle their domestic affairs alone, there would be small need, I fancy, of the thunderbolts that disturb our peace of mind.

And then a map, even of Africa, would be as harmless as a travel poster.

Canada Miserly of Recognition

By GEORGE HOGAN

THE recent Privy Council appointments of M. J. Coldwell and General H. D. G. Crerar were well deserved and widely acclaimed. But they raise again the question as to whether this really is the best way to honor our distinguished men.

This often appears to be a country that resents greatness. We are miserly of recognition to those who serve us well, and miserly of honor to those who have served in the past in building up our country. Any suggestion for the establishment of a Canadian system of honors, such as exists in almost every other country in the world, falls between a massive Father of Confederation and an egalitarian hostility.

One of the reasons for this is that when anyone talks about an honors system, they are immediately presumed to be talking about a restoration of British honors and titles, such as was done by R. B. Bennett in the 1930s. This of course is not the point at all. What is needed are genuine Canadian honors, based on our own traditions. We don't even need to create new institutions for this purpose; all we need is to make effective use of those we already have.

Let us begin with the Privy Council. In my opinion, this institution ought to undergo one important change. By tradition, the Canadian prime minister is a member of the British Privy Council, and is entitled to be called "The Right Honorable." All other ministers are members of the Canadian Privy Council, and entitled to be called simply "The Honorable." This presumably is a relic of the days when a colonial premier might be considered the equal of a British cabinet minister, but all other colonial ministers were a lesser breed. It is surprising that in the great rush to sweep away every vestige of colonialism no one has noticed this. Surely Irrespective of political following, it cannot be denied that one of the most exciting feats of the Soreled government in B.C. is the provision of the spectacular government campsites; they merit rare notices.

A month ago we visited and stayed at three of the Island's offerings and while they were sparsely occupied, had the joy of examining the campsites individually, each one differently and exquisitely selected and placed, varying from the choice of the gorgeous to the wide choice of those desiring complete seclusion amidst crowds.

These campsites are a veritable fairyland, and those whose responsibility it was to design the "nooks" must have had great fun as well as sensitive imagination. When one realizes the access roads and this wealth of adventure and experience offered to everyone with no restrictions, a well of gratitude emerges at the thought of this government's perpetual interest in its people's happiness and welfare.

Ways of Honoring Greatness

By GEORGE HOGAN

the Queen's Privy Council in Canada ought to carry the same rank, and the same title, as the Queen's Privy Council in Britain.

As for honoring our distinguished citizens, there are already in existence two Canadian institutions which I think would serve admirably for this purpose. These are the Order of Canada and the Order of the Queen. Almost everybody has his own theory for Senate reform. Personally, I think such reforms should be based on a realistic recognition of what the Senate really is. The Fathers of Confederation established the Senate as a guardian of provincial rights.

No one would seriously claim that it performs that function today. They also envisaged it as a chamber of sober second thoughts, to review legislation passed by the elected members of the Commons. While it still has this power, it is highly unlikely in this democratic age, that the Senate could survive any all-out attempt to use it. No, the Senate's prime function even now is more honorary than legislative. But the honors today are often for party rather than for national service. I have no objection to that. A man can serve his country just as well in a political party as in the army or in business. And political experience is probably a better preparation for a useful senator than most other kinds of experience.

Still, it ought to be possible to use the Senate to honor people for national as well as party purposes. I think the way to do this is to make the Senate bigger. I think our Senate would be more useful if it was something like the British House of Lords, only without the hereditary principle. There is no limit on the membership in the House of Lords. At the same time, there is no pay for being a member of the House of Lords, unless the member actually attends sittings. Many peers never go near the chamber but they always have the right to do so if they wish.

This system could not be copied exactly in Canada, because it would always be necessary to maintain a balance between the provinces and between the races. But we could meet this need by leaving the present basis of senatorial appointment exactly as it is, only reducing the term from life membership to a period of, say, five years.

During his active five-year term, a senator would have exactly the same status as he has now, as far as pay, voting, and so on, is concerned. At the end of five years, he would lose his right to vote and his regular pay. But he would still retain the title and rank of senator, would still have the right to sit in the Senate and take part in debates, and to be paid on a per diem basis for doing so.

In this way, within a generation we could probably expand the Senate to about five times its present size, while still preserving whatever regional and constitutional equities need to be preserved in the Senate's actual voting arrangements.

Many people have urged that the stillborn Canada Medal be activated as a means of honoring our distinguished citizens. The great difficulty about this has apparently been in deciding whom to give the medal to.

If the Senate were reformed in the manner I have suggested, I think it would be possible to award the Canada Medal on a more widespread basis than may have been the original intention. The Senate could be a means of honoring Canada's most outstanding sons, like Mr.

Why not an item of really first-class news on the fifth page which surely should have been on the front page? I quote one item: "Bon's favorable trade balances tripled in the first quarter of 1964 to $600,000,000. There are predictions that the trade surplus for 1964 may reach two billion dollars. The total value of exports is expected to reach 16.5 billion dollars."

The whole explanation is based on keeping the price costs of your manufactured goods so they can really compete on the international market, a lesson our federal representatives lost sight of when they set their remuneration at an 80 per cent increase as an example to others.

Coldwell and General Crerar, while the Canada Medal could be given out much more widely as a honorary recognition to leaders in the arts, sciences, business, politics, and other fields of endeavor.

The British, the Americans, the French, and many others have found that building a pride in the achievements of their great men is an essential step in building pride in the country itself. If we would stop the erosion of our national consciousness through the growth of ideas like separatism and annexation, we should follow their example, and soon.

How to Cut It

By GEORGE HOGAN

THE largest contributor to the summer slaughter on the highways is the inattentive driver.

One out of every seven accidents is caused by lapses on the part of normally good drivers.

How can we reduce this loss of life, limb and property?

Ontario's minister of highways suggests that one way is to recognize the special hazards of summer driving — hazards of which we are too often unconscious.

Overloaded cars with attached boats and trailers require special, more careful handling and reduced speed.

The distractions of children, the heat, the monotony and the frustrations of slow moving traffic can combine to deprive a driver of his normal good sense and good judgment.

The holiday mood, a sense of freedom and abandon can easily lead a person into a false sense of security—especially when a few drinks are added.

We tend to forget that the mechanical condition of cars can be seriously affected by heat and long distance. An extra safety check can make the difference between a close call and a calamity.

Another summer highway menace is "tailgating"—drawing up to within a few yards of the car in front. Safety officials recommended that one car length should be allowed for every 10 miles an hour of speed.

Like so many rules it works well if everyone complies. But inevitably some idiot takes advantage of the open space to dart in and out of a line of traffic menacing the safety of all.

Perhaps the most effective way to combat the summer highway slaughter is to assume that other drivers might temporarily take leave of their senses. The chances are you will be right—and alive.

There have, however, been some awkward moments. There was the prospect of Chinese Prime Minister Chou Enlai arriving at Entebbe airport on a state visit and being met by an honor guard of the Soots Guards. There was the police protection which had to be given the Rwanda Embassy at the time of the Batutsi massacres, and which had to be given to the British High Commission at the time of the Tank Hill settler party.

There is the apocryphal story of the Russian diplomat who met the head of a Chinese mission at a sundowner in Kampala's Grand Hotel.

"Good evening, Comrade," said the Russian. "What brings you to Uganda?"

"I've been having talks with Prime Minister Dr. Obote," said the Chinese.

"May I ask what the subject was?"

"Oh, the usual thing, you know—aid to underdeveloped countries."

"Ah, yes," murmured the Russian. "And is Dr. Obote going to give you any?"

An instance occurred recently when the foreign minister of the United Arab Republic and an Israeli minister arrived on a visit to Uganda at the same time—and on the same plane. By dint of swift dodging back and forth, all the appropriate ministers managed to welcome both of them without offending either.

In the formulation of her foreign policy and the success with which it is being pursued, Uganda could provide lessons for many more experienced and sophisticated nations.

Uganda Unentangled

Friendly And Fair

By Special OFNS Correspondent from Kampala

UGANDA is one of the few countries which has no claim on or dispute with any other state. For a small, landlocked country which has frontiers with five others, this is a big achievement.

It has not come about fortuitously. There are around Uganda's borders the makings of a frightening number of those problems which are dissipating the energies and jeopardizing the integrity of many newly-independent territories.

In half-a-dozen places a frontier cuts through tribal lands, leaving part of a tribe in Uganda and part in a neighboring territory. Then there is Western Kenya, which was arbitrarily axed from Uganda's jurisdiction by the colonial power, a slice of Congo country which Britain swapped with Belgium for the West Nile District, while Britain and Belgium nearly came to blows over where Kigezi ends and Rwanda begins.

Faced with these possible problems, Uganda decided that the sensible solution was to leave things as they were, offer unqualified friendship to all her neighbors, and allow the passage of time to wear away any friction that remained.

Thus, while Congolese and Sudanese snipe at and harass one another along their frontier, neither has any quarrel with Uganda. Rwanda is seeking to develop her trade routes through Uganda, owing to differences with her twin territory Burundi. Kenya, while engaged in fighting off the Shifita in the north, knows she can rely on the full co-operation of the Uganda authorities in any frontier trouble between Turkana and Karamojong. As for the Uganda-Tanzania border, it is so quiet that nobody ever hears of it.

This state of affairs is the result of a carefully considered and scrupulously implemented foreign policy. And simply because it has been so smoothly successful it has not been paid the attention it deserves.

While the formulation and launching of the "fair and friendly" external policy was not an easy accomplishment, maintaining it has sometimes been even more difficult.

When the Congolese began making sorties into West Nile and raiding Uganda fishermen on the border lakes, Uganda tightened her security but neither indulged in reprisals nor in public recriminations.

She approached the Congolese authorities with the attitude, "We know you don't want serious trouble, so let's sit down together and sort this thing out in a friendly way."

A similar approach has overcome incipient trouble on the Sudan border, while on occasion Uganda has been able to use her good offices to restore peaceful relations between the Congo and the Sudan.

The many thousands of refugees who have found a haven in Uganda have also posed a difficult problem for the government in succoring them while remaining on good terms with the regimes from which they fled. This has been complicated by persistent refugee attempts to use Uganda as a springboard for the reinvigoration of their homelands.

So far she has also been successful in resisting efforts to entangle her with the affairs of one world bloc or another. She has refused to be forced into anyone's camp, but managed to do so without incurring anyone's animosity.

There have, however, been some awkward moments. There was the prospect of Chinese Prime Minister Chou Enlai arriving at Entebbe airport on a state visit and being met by an honor guard of the Soots Guards. There was the police protection which had to be given the Rwanda Embassy at the time of the Batutsi massacres, and which had to be given to the British High Commission at the time of the Tank Hill settler party.

Cheques for some $20,000,000 were mailed out as the Canadian government made its first family allowance payments to mothers, 19 years ago today—in 1945. The total then registered called for a payment of $252,560,000 annually to be spent towards the maintenance, care, training, education and advancement of children.

All families with dependent children up to 16 years of age are eligible to receive the payments.

with Alec Merriman

We returned to the Sombrio Sunday, found the cave and discovered there really are fish in the Sombrio River.

The Sombrio Trail starts 2.4 miles beyond Loos Creek, almost at the midway mark of the Jordan River-Port Renfrew Road. A metal plaque at the side of the road on top of a hill marks the start of the trail.

It took us three-quarters of an hour to stroll along the muddy trail to the beach, and it took us one hour to climb back up the trail.

Object of the trip was to explore Sombrio Beach at an extreme low tide, to see just how it compared with Botanical Beach near Port Renfrew.

It is an interesting beach with a huge sandstone reef like that of Botanical Beach, but it is nowhere as rich in marine life.

Unlike Botanical Beach, Sombrio Beach has a good expanse of sandy beach with plenty of ideal camping and picnicking spots under the trees and beside the river.

It is something in between sandy China Beach and interesting Botanical Beach.

Its reef is interesting. There are tidal pools and fancy seaweeds, but they are not quite as intriguing and abundant with sea life as those at Botanical.

Our first target was to scamper out as far as we could on the reef to some huge and high rocks at the tip, where sometimes the seals and sea lions rest. Then we explored the flat reef and its marine life.

Weird sandstone formations, like fountains in the rock and abstract sculpture dominate the far corner of the reef.

Then as we headed south we came to two small caves and then another beach. We wondered, with a little disappointment, if the small caves were the ones we were searching for, but at the end of the second beach we found out they were not.

There we found the real Sombrio cave, a cave with three gaping entrances carved out of a huge conglomerate stone cliff.

We crawled into the cave and after only a few feet were able to stand upright in a huge cavern, big enough to stage a beach party. Small stalactites hung down from the wall.

This wasn't a big cave in as much as it didn't extend very far, but it was quite a feeling to stand under that huge cliff.

Its boulder floor was littered with driftwood washed into the cave in the high tides.

Outside the cave we came smack up against a conglomerate rock wall, beyond which beckoned for exploration.

We climbed up the wall and in front of us was a high sandstone cliff, which outlined against the sky looked almost as much like a sphinx as the Sphinx itself.

In front of us a seal played in the water. Around the corner was a bay and dropping from the high cliff into the sea was a waterfall, which wasn't much more than a trickle then but which must be a beautiful sight to see when rivers are running high.

We retraced our steps back along the beach to the Sombrio River, beachcombing as we went.

The Sombrio where it dumps into the open Pacific is the collection of the four Sombrios which start above the Port Renfrew Road and become one further downstream.

It is small and beautiful and on our last Sombrio trip in the fall, cut short by threatening darkness, we wondered about its fishing potential.

This time we picnicked along its bank just where the old cable lift crosses the river, which was so low it was simple to wade.

Here we met Mrs. Joe Webb, whom we had met at Long Beach even before the days when there was a Toffino Road, Don Fitzwalter and Uvic marine biology student and Undersea Garden diver John Davis.

Davis told us one of his pals had caught a steelhead in the Sombrio a few weeks before.

The river was really a little low to fish, but we had little trouble luring a number of small fish, probably steelhead smolts and salmon parr, to our silver-bodied teal fly and we had one on that would have been a keeper.

Probably in higher water there would be some nice searun cutthroats at certain times of the year.

Drink Rules Drawn

SHEFFIELD, Eng. (UPI)—The Bramall Lane Cricket and Football Club has ruled that it will allow patrons to drink beer from bottles at cricket matches, but will ban everything except harmless plastic cups at soccer matches.

The reason: soccer fans throw things on the field, but cricket spectators are supposed to be gentlemen.

Canadian Girl Wins Hurdles Best Time of Her Career

DUBLIN (CP-Reuters)—Jennifer Wingerson, 21-year-old Canadian Olympic hopeful, won the 80-metre hurdles race at an international meet here Tuesday night in the best time of her career—10.9 seconds.

With a tremendous finish, the blonde secretary from Toronto defeated Pam Kilborn of Australia, the British Empire Games champion at the distance. Miss Kilborn also was clocked in 10.9 seconds, a time which gave her the first prize at Perth, Australia, in 1962.

The Canadian girl's victory surprised local track experts.

The Aussies, with ace Roy Emerson back in the fold, are heavily favored to sweep all five matches of the first round northern zone series against Canada opening here Friday. But Hopman, the non-playing captain, apparently felt anything his players might say could be used against them.

"I can talk to you," team member John Newcombe told reporters. "But don't ask me about Emerson, how we'll do, what I think of Montreal, who I think is the best player or what I think of our team."

As a radio newsman was about to tape an interview with 19-year-old Tony Roche, Hopman interrupted, calling the youngster over with a crook of his finger.

"It's all right to talk to him," Hopman told Roche. "But just make sure you don't talk about anything you don't know anything about. In other words, just talk about yourself."

Hopman himself rudely broke off interviews, telling reporters "I've talked to you long enough (five minutes)." then joined a non-press member of the reception for the two teams.

He also whisked players away from the reception well short of the advertised two-hour conference, which prompted one sports writer who has dealt with Hopman the last couple of times he was in Canada to remark:

"Well, here we go again. It's the same old Hopman."

Even the most optimistic of Canadian supporters could see no reason for Hopman to worry about anything.

JUST IN TIME

Emerson, current Wimbledon singles champion, was reinstated by Australia just in time for this series, after he had been suspended earlier for refusing to stay in Australia for tournaments. With Emerson back, the odds are sharply against Canada winning even one match.

The Aussies themselves are so confident they will advance to meet Mexico that they spent a week training in Mexico City before coming here, and left most of their clothes there in anticipation of an early return trip.

Palmer Plans on Struggle

Arnold Palmer starts out Thursday after the only major golf title that has eluded him, but he admits the competition in the Professional Golf Association tournament at Columbus, Ohio, may be tougher than ever before.

Jack Nicklaus, winner for the past two years, will be playing in his home town. Tony Lama, winner of four of the last six tournaments including the British Open, is playing what Palmer calls "sensational" golf, and U.S. Open champ Ken Venturi is another threat.

"I think it's going to take at least an eight-under-par 72 to win," Palmer said. "But anybody could get there first."

Palmer has won four Masters tournaments, two British Open and one U.S. Open titles. The PGA, last of the tour's "big four" has never been his.

Colts Bill Gaylord For Bat

HOUSTON (AP)—Gaylord Perry, San Francisco Giant pitcher, smashed the bat of Nellie Fox, Houston second baseman, in a rage Sunday night after Fox had singled home the winning run in the ninth inning for a 5-4 victory.

This latest development in the rumpus between the first-place Giants and the Colts that broke out in the seventh inning was disclosed Monday when the Colts filed a protest with National League president Warren Giles.

The Colts said they are sending a bill to Perry for the cost of the bat and indicated legal action would be taken against him if there is no rule prohibiting such action by a player.

Perry, who sat down on the pitching mound and changed his shoes when called into the game following the abrupt ejection of Billy O'Dell, picked up Fox's bat and smashed it against the side of the Giant dugout.

Designed to woo new residents to the city, a campaign poster is presented by Bill Boorman, former president of the Victoria Real Estate Board. If the campaign catches on, Victoria may indeed become the city which dares to be known by tea and crumpets alone. Mr. Boorman's Teabagii Crumpetus emblem has flowers, whose centres are crumpets and petals are tea bags, growing out of a tea pot. The poster was displayed at a recent real estate convention at Harrison Hot Springs.

1,000 Acres

Saltair Site Eyed For New Prison

The government is considering about 1,000 acres of crown land at Saltair, between Ladysmith and Chemainus, as the site for a new provincial medium security prison. Attorney-General Bonner said Tuesday the requirements now under examination are that the site should be sufficiently remote from private homes and commercial enterprises but still have easy access.

The new jail, for which a construction start is planned before March, 1965, will be similar to existing forest camps and eventually will house about 200 prisoners, mostly from Vancouver Island. Capital cost of the project will be kept "quite modest," the attorney-general said, by plans to provide accommodation for only a few inmates initially. The prisoners will build the remainder of the new quarters.

Illegitimate Babies

Figures Shock To Oak Bay

Oak Bay officials Tuesday expressed surprise—and a certain amount of dismay—when confronted with figures that seemed to indicate their rate of illegitimate births was second highest on the Island.

Said police chief Robert Smith: "This is quite a shock. I hadn't suspected there was a problem like this at all."

He was referring to the fact the provincial bureau of vital statistics showed the municipality as having a 9.1 per cent rate of illegitimate births—nearly one in 10—for 1962.

PROVINCIAL AVERAGE
This compares with the provincial average for the year of 7.3 per cent.

Other figures close to home show Esquimalt with less than 2 per cent; Sidney, 3 per cent; Saanich, 4.7 per cent; Victoria, 7.6 per cent; and Central Saanich, 8 per cent.

CAMPAIGN STARTED
Nanaimo, which has been the centre of much attention lately after gynecologist Dr. J. R. Howey began a campaign to cut down on such births, was quoted as having a 5 per cent rate—below the provincial average—in 1963.

Parksville had 10 per cent, to register the highest percentage on the Island, but Alert Bay, off the north coast, registered a rate of 19.5 per cent—almost one in five.

Oak Bay Chief Smith was at a loss to explain the figures, but he questioned their validity.

"We're no angels, just normal people," he said, "but nobody has given me any idea of such a thing before."

"We've had no social workers, no teachers coming to us complaining of a problem. Maybe the parents are taking care of it, covering it up."

'WE DON'T KNOW'
"There must be a lot going on that we don't know about."

"I don't want to be that naïve, to think that Oak Bay kids don't do these things—you get kids, cars, liquor, something's going to happen—but I can't help wondering if 1962 was perhaps an exception."

INACCURATE VIEW
"They don't tell us about 1960, 1961—maybe those years were different. If you look at any individual year like this, you're going to get an inaccurate view sometimes if it was an odd year."

J. G. Wallace, principal of Oak Bay High, said that he, too, was unaware of a problem.

"It was a surprise to me," he said. "It certainly hasn't appeared that this was the case."

The figures indicated Vancouver possessed one of the highest percentages—9.6 per cent. B.C. as a whole has had a steady advance in the illegitimacy rate in the past few years. In 1925 it was 1.48 per cent, as compared to the present 7.3.

Monthly Deduction
Charity Shift Near For Civil Service

A system of payroll deductions for charitable donations by B.C. government employees was announced yesterday by Provincial Secretary Wesley Black.

Government employees—though initially only in the Victoria, Vancouver and New Westminster areas—will be given the opportunity to make voluntary contributions on a monthly basis.

LOCAL COMMITTEES
In each area, said Mr. Black, an autonomous committee will be set up to administer the fund.

Victoria Flower in New War of Roses

U.S. Bloom Canada's Choice?

A new war of the roses is shaping up over the choice of a rose for Canada's centennial year of 1967, and a Victoria rose is in the forward lines.

The rose, bred by amateur hybridist Fred Blakeney, 963 Arundel, was picked some time ago by the Canadian Rose Society and the Canadian Nursery Trades Association as the only logical choice.

But now it turns out some Canadian Rotary clubs are conducting a contest among three U.S. varieties to produce a contender.

Len Cullen, of Willowdale, Ont., retiring president of the Nursery Trades Association, told the group's annual convention in Winnipeg Tuesday it would be "absolutely silly" for a U.S. rose to become a Canadian emblem.

He disclosed the Canadian centennial committee has made no decision yet on an official rose.

Officials said a Montreal rose fancier, J. G. McIntyre, interested Rotary clubs in sponsoring the contest among the U.S. varieties.

Under the plan clubs would arrange for sites where the roses would be displayed and the public would make the final choice.

The plan was started by the Montreal Lake Shore Rotary group and the idea is all Rotary clubs would get a share of the profits from sales of the selected U.S. rose.

But some clubs are staying outside the scheme because they feel not enough money would be raised. Victoria Rotarians last night declined comment until they know more of the scheme.

The nursery trades convention voted to name Mr. Blakeney's rose Miss Canada. The name Centennial Rose cannot be used because Mr. McIntyre has already received Ottawa's permission to give that name to a U.S. rose.

Bricklayers

Strike May Be Averted

A strike of Victoria bricklayers may be averted if progress is made today at a meeting between union spokesman William Gauld and contractor Gilbert Brown, director of the masonry section of the Victoria Building Exchange.

"We are meeting at 2 p.m. to explore the possibilities of ironing out the problems out," Mr. Brown said Tuesday.

VOTE SCHEDULED
Also scheduled for today at 4:45 p.m. is a strike vote of the bricklayers.

"I'm prepared to meet before taking the strike vote," Mr. Gauld said.

He warned, however, that if the vote is in the affirmative the usual 48-hour strike notice would go out "and we can withdraw our labor as soon as the 48 hours are up."

TWO YEARS
Calling of the strike vote followed rejection by employers of a recommendation by provincial conciliation officer William McLaughlin for raises totalling 46 cents an hour over two years in wages and welfare.

The bricklayers want 53 cents an hour, made up of 39 cents in wages, 7 cents health and welfare and 7 cents holiday pay.

STILL NOT PARITY
The bricklayers are the only union negotiating that did not ask for complete parity with Vancouver," Mr. Gauld said.

"If we were granted 53 cents it would still not give us parity with the bricklayers in Vancouver."

Twelve bricklayers will vote on the strike, Mr. Brown said.

"They may be small in number but they still have the same right to vote for strike action as if they were a large unit," Mr. Gauld said.

Robbie and Dena: Victorians rallied

Dena, Robbie Get Trip But Still Wistful

Dena Noble and Robbie Gillespie are getting their trip anyway—but they're both a bit wistful about it all.

B.C. Ferries and Vancouver Island Coach Lines rallied round after a Colonist story disclosed that promoter Roy Gordon had not come through on his offer of a free trip to Disneyland for the two youngsters.

They had won first prize in the two categories of a talent contest held during the Victoria spring flower festival, but then nothing happened, and Mr. Gordon advanced no plans in connection with the trip.

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the festival, meanwhile disclaimed any responsibility in the matter. Said Edwin Pearlman, president of the chamber: "It is now clear that the chamber had no responsibility, and that this was a private enterprise activity within the festival."

On Feb. 4 the committee for the festival had given specific instructions that the talent show be excluded from official festival arrangements.

Wherever the responsibility fell, however, it still left Robbie, 12, and Dena, 14, without a trip. And Victor Downward of the coach lines set out to do something about it.

He arranged with Ron Worley of the ferry service for the children to travel with one of their mothers to Hollywood via Greyhound Lines. There they will appear on a television show as per the original promises, but which one it will be is not yet known.

Best Birds Go to Show
City bird fanciers will be exhibiting their prized birds at the Pacific National Exhibition in Vancouver this summer.

Entering the show from Victoria are: Bert Pritchett who will exhibit fancy pigeons; Barney Woolley, old English black red game bantams and dark Cornish bantams; and, Will Christensen, standard poultry.

Dena and Robbie were grateful Tuesday, but they were still a bit downcast by the way things turned out.

"This is very nice and we sure appreciate it," said Robbie, "but I still sort of wish we were going down with Mr. Gordon."

Commented Mrs. Bill Gillespie: "Robbie still has faith in Mr. Gordon; he was very good with Robbie and Dena. But we just haven't heard anything specific from the man; he was in Victoria this week, but he didn't try to arrange the trip or anything."

"But the Colonist story certainly produced results. As soon as it was in the paper my phone started ringing—and now the children are getting their trip after all."

Robbie was still puzzled, though.

"How about Billy Zeptik, the boy in Vancouver who tied with me? What's going to happen to him? He was supposed to get a trip too."

'Don't Expect Too Much At Hearing'

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislative Reporter

Preliminary hearing by the Public Utilities Commission into the B.C. Hydro application to increase Greater Victoria transit fares to 25 cents will open in the law courts at 10 a.m. Aug. 5.

The PUC, in a written statement issued Tuesday, also warned that those who oppose the Hydro application should not expect too much from the hearing.

Letters received by the commission from various interested parties in the dispute over proposed transit fare increases both here and in Vancouver indicate, it said, "some misunderstanding as to the scope of the proposed hearing and as to the powers of the commission."

NO POWER
The statement added: "It must be clearly recognized that the commission has no power over any B.C. Hydro and Power Authority rates other than those for the transit services in the areas governed by the franchisees."

The PUC has no power to require anyone to subsidize transit services, but the commission pointed out that the Hydro may do so "by not demanding rates which will cover its entire costs."

The municipalities could subsidize transit services by foregoing a share of the revenue they now receive under the existing franchise agreements.

PAYMENTS, TOO
The commission noted that franchise payments would increase if rates are increased.

Municipalities also could, if they chose, pay a direct transit subsidy to the Hydro.

Since these matters are beyond the jurisdiction of the PUC, however, any move towards subsidies would have to be settled by bargaining between the parties to the franchise agreement.

Any agreement reached would still have to be submitted to the PUC for its approval.

The commission statement adds: "The public (as well as the franchise parties) is concerned. It pays the fares."

CAN REDUCE RATES
The PUC can reduce rates that are unfair to some classes of passengers provided that the revenue which the Hydro is obliged to forego can be made good by other classes of passengers.

It is up to the various groups who plan to protest fare increases in certain categories, the commission warned, to be ready to "clearly indicate" from what other transit rates they think the revenue can be replaced.

'NOT A FORUM'
Finally, the PUC statement said, the commission has "nothing whatever" to do with what may happen to transit services when the current franchise agreements run out in 1966.

It warned that the Aug. 5 and subsequent hearings "should not be used as a forum for discussions which go beyond the competence of the commission."

Militia Already in New Job Trend Away from Survival Training

By DON GAIN

Vancouver Island's militia has already started to resume its former role as support for the regular army at the same time de-emphasizing its role in national survival, Lt. Col. Douglas Nelson said Tuesday.

The operations officer of 25 Militia Group was commenting on the report of the commission headed by Brig. Earle Suttie of Montreal that looked into militia organization.

The first part of the report was given to the Commons Defence committee Tuesday by Defence Minister Cardin.

Mr. Cardin said it was neither logical nor sensible that the militia should undertake civil defence alone. He said the militia's capability for field operations was disintegrating.

NEXT JANUARY
The system of deductions will go into effect Jan. 1, 1965.

The action was recommended by a cabinet-appointed committee headed by deputy provincial secretary L. J. Wallace following several months of study.

Local committees will be organized immediately so pledge cards can be circulated in the early fall ready for next year.

containing the commission's recommendations on the disbandment or amalgamation of specific militia units, was not made public.

"We will have to wait for final results before any reasonable interpretation can be made," Col. Nelson said, "but whatever happens we will be ready to carry on."

Opposition MPs complained about the second part of the Suttie report not being made public.

Mr. Cardin himself admitted it would cause "tremendous and useless panic" in the militia if the Suttie recommendations were published before the defence department had decided what to do about them.

The decisions will be made by mid-October, he said, and the units concerned will be informed before the Commons committee is told.

No recommendations were made by the commission on the role of the militia.

This was established by the government last January but not made public until Tuesday when Mr. Cardin deposited in the committee the first report of the Suttie commission.

The roles and number of militiamen laid down by the defence department are:

● A framework for logistic and special units, 8,000 men.

● A training force of three brigade groups which would replace regular brigades on mobilization, 18,000 men.

● Internal security, 2,500 men.

● National survival, 1,500 men.

The militia was given the national survival role by the Conservative government and has trained at it for five years at a cost of about $218,000,000.

The 43,696-member militia, as announced last December will be cut to 30,000.

The militia won't be able to recruit a single man, said Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West).

Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) said the defence department is playing cat-and-mouse with the committee, which was being left completely in the dark.

Mr. Cardin himself admitted it would cause "tremendous and useless panic" in the militia if the Suttie recommendations were published before the defence department had decided what to do about them.

The decisions will be made by mid-October, he said, and the units concerned will be informed before the Commons committee is told.

Baseball, softball, lacrosse and golf will be forbidden except in certain specified parks in Victoria in the future—but the regulation will be enforced with discretion.

What that means is that police have no intention of making an arrest when they see two boys playing catch.

Park Sports Banned But Not Enforced—Yet

Parks Commissioner H. W. Warren said signs were posted in certain parks forbidding baseball but no municipal legislation had been passed to back them up, and police, when it came right down to it, were powerless.

If city council follows the recommendation of Tuesday's committee meeting, the legislation will be forthcoming.

Gathers Material For Book

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C. (CP)—Author Christie Harris is off in search of material for another book—this time to the isolated Queen Charlotte Islands off the northern British Columbia coast.

With the help of a Canada Council grant, Mrs. Harris will work on a historical novel about the famed Haida Indian carver, Charlie Edenshaw. As with most of her stories, it will be aimed mainly at young readers.

Mrs. Harris, who lives with her family near Vancouver, has been bringing out new books at the rate of one a year. This year it's You Have to Draw the Line Somewhere, a fictionalized story based on the career of her daughter, Moira, a New York fashion illustrator, who did the illustrations for the book.

Next year it will be a historical adventure set in Western Canada and in 1965 the story of Charlie Edenshaw.

Mrs. Harris, who was born in the Fraser Valley, began her career writing children's stories for newspapers. Later she became a CBC script writer and turned out about 350 school broadcasts plus plays, musical fantasies, talks and sketches.

She lived for a time in Prince Rupert and it was here she did research for Once Upon a Totem, a book of Indian legends.

Accompanying her to the islands are her husband, Capt. T. A. Harris, who retired in 1961 from the immigration department, and the youngest of their five children, Gerald, 15.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: So now I'm a prostitute. According to you, that is. In a recent column you said, "When sex is used by a wife as payment for favors and is withheld as punishment, it places the marriage at the level of prostitution."

Well, what else can a woman do when sex is the only effective weapon she has? I've been married to this character for 18 years and it's the only approach that works.

My husband is a professional man with an income that exceeds $40,000 a year. Almost every woman I know gets an allowance from her husband. But not me. My husband doesn't believe a wife needs an allowance. He says, "What for? You're home all day."

The only way I can get money out of him is to nail him when he's in an amorous mood. It isn't quite as commercial as it sounds, Ann, but that's about the size of it.

Now, do you blame me?—THE PROFESSIONAL AMATEUR

Dear Amateur: If this has been going on for 18 years, you aren't going to change it. A man with your husband's twisted concept of married love is not about to be re-trained.

A bouquet of skunk cabbage to him, however, for reducing you to such a level. And my deepest sympathy to you. You've missed it all.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are friendly with a nice couple who come to our home every week to play cards. They have two sons who are the same ages as our boys, so we take our children when we go to their home, and they bring their children when they come to us.

We know that normal boys are bubbling over with energy and we don't expect them to be angels, but we do insist that our children respect other people's property. These friends let their boys wear cowboy boots which have cleats on the bottom and they have wrecked our floors. Our own sons wear tennis shoes in the house.

Next month we are having our floors re-done. I dread to think of what those two kids will do to the new floor. Do I dare say anything to the parents? You once said in your column, "Floors are to walk on," when someone wrote about the effects of high-heels on vinyl.—UN, D. CIDE

Dear Un: Floors are to walk on. Lady, but cleats on cowboy boots are not normal in-the-house footwear. If you allow those kids to ruin your new floors with their cleats you've got oatmeal where your brains belong.

Ask them to leave their boots by the front door and offer your sons' spare tennis shoes or suggest they run around in their socks.

Ask Clinics For Sex Deviates

OTTAWA (CP)—A resolution urging special clinics for the treatment of known sex deviates was passed by the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

The 7,000-member federation's biennial convention recommended that the federal government take the lead in establishing the clinics.

The resolution also asked the government to insure that no known sex offender be released from custody until he is judged to be cured by a psychiatrist board.

A resolution submitted by the Regina club, passed by a slim margin, urged the government to amend the Income Tax Act making dividends from taxable corporations tax-free for individual taxpayers.

The convention endorsed the principle of a more uniform education system for Canada, but with reservations.

The resolution on education was submitted by the Trenton, Ont., club. It urged the federal government to change its "education policy" and set up a uniform system and uniform standards of education in all provinces.

After a number of women pointed out that education is a provincial matter and the resolution could not be made effective without changes in the British North American Act, the Trenton resolution was amended.

What finally resulted was a watered-down version of the first resolution, commending the various educational organizations in the provinces for their efforts in "currently working" towards more uniform standards.

Membership Down a Bit

OTTAWA (CP)—Membership of the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs has dropped to slightly below 7,000 from a peak of 7,200, the federation's biennial convention was told Monday.

Cool and creamy Tuna Mousse is made with tuna, toasted corn cereal crumbs, shredded cheese, cream and mayonnaise. Onion, sweet pickles and hot sauce will awaken the poorest of appetites.

Flavor Variation

Tuna Mousse Summer Fare

Cool, creamy and tasty Tuna Mousse is just right for those hot evenings when a cold and on-the-light-side dinner seems just right. Make it in the morning, or even the day before, and dinner awaits your pleasure.

Even though we like light and cold foods, we still would like to have enough sustenance to provide energy and also to satisfy appetites. Tuna Mousse will do just that because "crunchy" crumbs of toasted corn cereal have been included for both flavor and energy.

If you wish to serve an entirely meatless meal, use the vegetable bouillon cube, as we have. However, for a variation in flavor, you may try using chicken bouillon.

With this eat-where-and-when-you-please molded tuna, serve tiny cocktail tomatoes sliced almost in half for easy eating and crisp sliced cucumbers. Hot corn-on-the-cob and garlic French bread may ease your conscience if you really belong to the hot-meal school of thought. Bake your own cherry pie or serve one of the many fine frozen items available, and you will have hot-weather meals licked for one day at least.

TUNA MOUSSE

Two envelopes unflavored gelatin; 1 cup cold water; 1 vegetable bouillon cube; 1 cup hot water; 1/2 cup mayonnaise; 1/2 teaspoon onion powder; 3 dashes hot sauce; 1/2 cup shredded process American cheese; 1 tin (6 1/2-oz.) chunk tuna, drained; 3-4 tablespoons drained sweet pickle relish; 2 cups bite-size toasted corn cereal crushed to 1 cup; 1/2 cup whipping cream, whipped. Dissolve gelatin in cold water. Add gelatin, mayonnaise, onion powder and hot sauce. Mix well. Chill until syrupy. Fold in remaining ingredients. Pour into 4 1/2-cup mold. Chill 2-3 hours or until set. Unmold on greens. Serve with sour cream and chives.

Yield: six servings.

Red Roses In Bride's Bouquet

St. Andrew's Cathedral was the setting for the recent marriage of Christine Ann Mahon and Mr. Lannard Wayne Anderson.

Rev. Father Maurice Costello officiated at the pretty summer wedding for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Worthington of West Gorton, England, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Anderson of Parksville.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Mr. Melvin Brundage, chose a knee-length white sateen gown styled with belled skirt and bustle. The fitted bodice featured a round neckline and long sleeves. Her fingertip veil misted from a coronet of crystal charm and red roses were in her bouquet. She wore an heirloom bracelet for "something old" and a pearl drop pendant and matching earrings, gift of the groom. Matron of honor, Mrs. John Fyfe, was in a gold brocade sheath and wore a whimsy hat to match. Bridesmaid Miss Joan Gilroy of Vancouver wore a blue brocade dress with whimsy hat to match. They carried white carnations.

Mr. Jim Troy was best man. Mr. George Madill and Mr. Stuart Carson ushered.

A reception followed at the bride's former home in Victoria. An attractive three-tier wedding cake, made by the groom's mother, centred the bride's table.

For a honeymoon trip to the United States the bride changed into a pale green linen three-piece suit with white accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are now making their home at 1534 Elford Street.

After a two-month tour of Europe and a visit with the bride's grandmother in Ireland, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ernest Pelling will make their home in Prince George.

F. G. Hamilton officiated at the evening ceremony in Victoria Gospel Hall which united Joy Arlene McCartney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David McCartney, 2515 Cook Street, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Pelling of 2024 Camarvon Street, Victoria.

Stands of white gladioli chrysanthemums and daisies at the front and on the organ decorated the hall. Mr. Joe Gilmour sang "Wedding Prayer" during the ceremony, and "Lord's Prayer" during the signing of the register, accompanied by Miss Pauline Carter.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a taffeta gown overlaid with silk organza. The fitted bodice enhanced with lace appliques and pearls featured scooped neckline and lily point sleeves. Self-fabric rose accented back which dipped to a V. Lace appliques and pearls highlighted front panel of the floor-length skirt which swept into a chapel train.

Atchison-Sandilands

Duncan to Be Home

Pink carnations and white chrysanthemums decorated First Baptist Church last Saturday evening when Rev. John A. Watson heard marriage vows exchanged between Joyce Hope Sandilands and Mr. Duncan Leslie Atchison.

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Carlson, 300 Quadra Street and Mrs. W. P. Powell, Duncan, and the late J. L. Atchison.

Soloist, Mrs. Norman Duckworth, Duncan, the groom's cousin, sang "Because" during signing of the register. Organist was Mr. John E. Tunstall.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a short pink lace sheath-style gown with matching lace jacket that featured three-quarter-length sleeves and stand-up lace collar. Her pink tulle veil misted to shoulder-length from a headpiece of pink organza. White gladioli centred with tiny pink roses were in her hand corsage.

Miss Alice Joyce was maid of honor for her cousin. She wore a street-length bell-skirted gown of light blue peau de soie with matching floral headpiece. Only jewelry was a crystal necklace, gift of the bride, and she carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

Junior bridesmaid, Miss Deborah Carlson, the bride's sister, wore a white cotton frock embroidered with lace flowers. Only jewelry was a silver bracelet, gift of the bride. She carried a basket of pink carnations.

Mr. Tom Lowe, Duncan, was best man and guests were ushered by Mr. Dick McEwan and Mr. Dave Bennington of Duncan. A three-tier wedding cake centred the bride's table at reception that followed in the home of her parents. Toast was proposed by Ross Sims.

Following a honeymoon trip to Qualicum Beach the newly-weds will make their home in Duncan where the groom is an accountant.

For travelling, the bride wore a beige wool skirt with white jacket, white accessories and red rose corsage. She topped the ensemble with a green and white wool coat.

Model Adrienne Suriana wears a sheer bodiced dress in New York in which only the filmiest layer of flesh-colored marquisette "for figure control" separates the net surface of the blouse from the bare truth. In Rome

Knitwear Stars Opening

ROME (UPI) — The Italian fall-winter fashion shows opened here with previews of furs, knitwear, lingerie and children's clothes.

Asunta set the fall-winter scene with fresh ideas on furs. For sportswear, she presented handsome jackets — one side shaggy wild sheep skin and the other colorful Sardinian embroidery. She carried the embroidery theme into evening for the lining of an opaline mink coat with matching boots.

The same collection featured combinations such as mink and python, lynx and champagne broadtail, and black broadtail lined with white mink.

Gabor's collection of high fashion lingerie was a froth of lace and silk. It even included a bodice "topless" that was as chaste as white lace frills could make it. Another innovation by this designer was the reversible negligee—candy pink surah on one side and a pastel print on the other.

Knitwear—a Roman favorite—was one of the stars of the opening day collections.

Albertina opened her show with a handsome white, hooded crocheted coat. Scarf collars and slit coats were a trademark of the collection. Amber-toned "etruscan" shades combined with an off-black called "asphalt" were the favorite colors of the collection.

Loty liked beadwork on knits and illustrated her point with a piece of white knit outfit. Milo used bold contrasts of black and white for a collection of knits for all occasions.

The most beguiling models of the day were the Roman tots who presented Zingone's fashions for the kindergarten set.

For little boys, Zingone suggested striped flannel, starched collars and velvet suits with pleated collars.

The silhouette for little girls was bell shaped and the waistline—where there was one—was slight.

White was Zingone's favorite color, followed by blues, greys and pinks.

Plants Like Mules

By M. V. CHESTNUT, FRHS

A bi-generic hybrid is something of a rarity in nature, for the term refers to the offspring of two entirely different races—much as if you had succeeded in crossing a cat with a dog and obtained offspring.

Bi-generic hybrids are not entirely unknown in the animal kingdom. I believe that beef cattle have been bred successfully to the buffalo, and of course we have the mule—the offspring of a donkey and a mare. In such experiments, though, the children of such mixed marriages are almost always sterile, incapable of breeding, thus bringing the breeding program to a dead end.

In the plant world we have, among the very few bi-generic hybrids, a houseplant called the Fatschiera, whose mother was an Oriental shrub called Fatsia and whose father was the common English ivy, Hedera. Another houseplant is the result of a crossing between a Gloxinia and the Cape Primrose, Streptocarpus.

One of the most interesting of the bi-generic hybrids is not a houseplant but an amazingly beautiful plant for the outdoor garden called Venidium.

Arctotis Sutton's Triumph, an accidental cross between Venidium fastuosum and Arctotis grandis, and this is the story of how it came about:

It began about 20 years ago in the Royal Horticultural Society's test gardens at Wisley, England. It is the custom of the society to run test trials of various kinds of plants from time to time, to determine the best strains and varieties, and in this instance trial beds were set up for the growing and evaluation of various kinds of South African daisy-like plants, including Arctotis, Dimorphotheca, Ursinia and Venidium.

Seeds were saved from some of these test plants, and one of these seeds, taken from an apparently normal plant of Venidium fastuosum, produced some very queer flowers.

The Venidiums are big, rather coarse-looking daisies, vivid orange petals with a blue-black disc and a striking dark blue ring. Incidentally, they do well here.

The little newcomer had the black ring of its mother, all right, but the petals, instead of being a dark orange, were a pale creamy white which, in some lights, seemed to radiate a faint bluish tinge. This bluing suggested that the male parent may have been Arctotis grandis, a daisy with great elegance and charm, with silvery petals and a deep blue disc. Arctotis also grows well here, although I have never succeeded in protecting the delicate petals from being chewed up by bugs.

Plant breeders were quick to use the new flower for breeding experiments, and development work has gone ahead steadily since that time, most of it under the direction of Mr. Balfour, plant breeder with the firm of Sutton & Sons Ltd. Most of these experiments ended up in blind alleys, producing gorgeous plants which were, like the mule, completely sterile and incapable of setting seed.

Sutton's Triumph is one of these "mules" and the only way to get plants for your garden is to buy footed cuttings or beg slips and root them yourself. Within the new race of plants, though, there are fertile kinds, and seeds are available under the names Arctotis Hybrids and Venidium Hybrids. These should provide a most interesting gamble, for with the blood of two different species in them, anything can happen.

Sobering Thought, Says JACK SMITH

Scotch Baffles Scientists

The British government, I read the other day, has admitted complete defeat in an attempt to synthesize whisky and brandy in the laboratory.

It's refreshing to hear scientists admit these days that there's anything they can't do. They've treated us to one terrifying miracle after another—nuclear gas, television, the H-bomb. We've had little reason to believe they couldn't achieve the ultimate triumph and disintegrate the planet.

So any setback is encouraging. It gives a man the same feeling as when a computer errs in a calculation, or writes a bad line of poetry. He feels there's hope for the human race yet.

Her Majesty's Department of Scientific and Industrial Research, which failed in the whisky project, has reassured us that there are still dark pockets of nature which the light of technology can't penetrate.

I admire the candor of Her Majesty's scientists. It is a kind of heresy, really, to confess failure in an age when belief in the omnipotence of science is the popular new faith.

The British researchers were awed by what they found when they tried to open the secrets of brandy, that supreme transmutation of the grape. They found themselves in God's own laboratory.

One type of brandy, they reported humbly, contained 23 different chemicals and traces of hundreds of others, which, they said, "react with each other in a manner impossible to predict."

There is somehow much satisfaction in knowing that our scientists, who have dismantled the atom and synthesized the sun, boggle at the complexity of a simple snifter of brandy or a snort of Scotch.

They can predict the conduct of the heavenly bodies in their orbits, but they can't predict what will happen when the juices in a vat get together with some of the other juices, much less what happens when these juices get together with the juices of a tired businessman after a hard day at the office.

Imagine the folly of a sober team of English chemists muddling about in their laboratories with a rack of vials, test tubes and Bunsen burners, wistfully hoping to come up with a tolerable Scotch or cognac.

We can't blame them for trying. From time to time over the centuries the English have subdued the Irish, the Scots and the French by force of arms. But they've never yet produced a drop of decent Irish whisky, Scotch or cognac.

Only gin, that colorless, characterless neutral spirit which can be created by a chemist with little or no help from nature, God or Bacchus.

There is only one way to make Scotch. First, take some barley from the Highland fields, mix with malt and Highland water and boil in a pot still. Put the distillate in a wooden cask and wait 12 years.

If you're in a hurry, wait eight.

There is no other way, Sirs.

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Calculated Risk

LONDON (NANA)—French star Alain Delon, now in London to film The Yellow Rolls Royce, is just about ready for marriage—his first. The future Madame Delon? Pretty Nathalie Barthelmie, now getting a divorce and the mother of a little girl. For five years Alain was engaged to Romy Schneider. "No more long engagements," he told me recently. "The next time I fall in love I will get married." He is in love with Nathalie.

Two top character actors in two interesting plays—Margaret Rutherford will star on the British stage in The Solid Gold Cadillac . . . and Art Carney, now making his first movie, the above-mentioned Yellow Rolls Royce—this is the age of autos—will star on Broadway this coming season in The Odd Couple, by Neil Simon, who wrote Barefoot in the Park, and Mike Nichols, who directed same, will repeat.

George C. Scott will play Abraham to Ava Gardner's Sarah in the Dino de Laurentis production of The Bible. I asked George how old Abraham was when Mrs. A. gave birth to Isaac. "Ninety-nine," replied George, "and he lived to be something like 165." That, of course, was before cars and television took their toll on nerves, heart and sinews.

Jane Fonda's Love Cage received mixed reviews in Paris but is doing very good business. Jane, better known and more popular in France than she is in North America, has sort of taken the place of Tony Perkins with the people of Paris. They adore Tony, but he went away. So will Jane, one of these days, but she won't say when. Neither will Roger Vadim . . . Which reminds me, Brigitte Bardot is in St. Tropez with Bob Zagari, who has lasted longer than most of her husbands or boy friends.

Frank Sinatra pool-poohed the story that he was ill with exhaustion in Stockholm. He is now in the south of France, getting in a golfing vacation before starting his new picture in Italy. Nonetheless, he did faint, apparently, and he is not as young as he used to be. The shock of nearly drowning in Hawaii and his son's kidnapping left their scars. With the half century mark not too far away, Frankie should take it a bit easier on all fronts.

I saw a wonderful play last night at Her Majesty's Theatre, The Right Honorable Gentleman. The stars are Anthony Quayle, who has appeared in many pictures, Corale Browne and Anna Massey. It's about the romantic scandal that wrecked the career of Sir Charles Dike in the 1880s. There is more than a strong resemblance to the John Profumo—Christine Keeler case.

Richard Brooks was determined that the ending of his Lord Jim would remain a secret. So only Peter O'Toole of the Lord cast received a completed script. At the end of the picture, the director had a nice bonfire burning all the scripts. And not even his Columbia bosses know whether he followed the ending in the Conrad story.

Remember?

By HAL BOYLE

Memories date people just as surely as growth rings tell the age of a tree.

So, if you're trying to pass for under 50, never admit out loud that you can remember when—It cost a dime to go to the movies.

Motor cars had isinglass curtains to protect the occupants from rain or cold weather.

All babies were born at home. It was unthinkable for a mother to go to hospital to give birth. Hospitals were for sick persons.

Dieting was practically unheard of. A fat man could spill more calories on his necktie at lunch than a modern doctor would now allow him to eat all day.

When you wanted to go out for an evening of fun on the town, you said: "Let's make whoopee!"

When you felt upset, you didn't run off to a psychiatrist, but or gulp a couple of tranquilizer pills. A strong dose of epsom salts usually cured anything that ailed you.

The ideal marriage was that between Doug Fairbanks and Mary Pickford. Everyone felt sure it would last forever.

No wife expected her husband to help with the dishes. The kitchen was her empire and she ruled it alone.

The height of romance was for a young fellow to call up a long-distance telephone operator and make a blind date with her.

Small towns had hitching posts, no parking meters.

An heirloom in many families was the long-bladed straight razor handed down from father to son.

Telephones came in only one color—black—and you didn't dial them. You cranked them. Those were the days. Remember?

Car Charge Laid

Two men arrested Monday for possession of a stolen car were remanded without plea to Friday when they appeared in Colwood magistrate's court Tuesday.

Richard Gordon Gray, 31, of Vancouver, and Michael Dennis Coates, 20, of Magna Bay, Shuswap Lake, were checked by a Colwood RCMP constable at a Malahat restaurant Monday when he noticed a car answering the description of one stolen June 2 in North Surrey.

Two other people in the car at the time were not involved in the charge.

A 30-30 rifle was also found in the car.

A man charged with shooting a 22 rifle without a permit was fined $10 in Colwood magistrate's court Tuesday.

Leonard Creed, 2927 Shelbourne, was checked by Colwood RCMP on the Victoria Fish and Game Club grounds June 10, where he was firing the rifle into the bush in company with a juvenile.

He pleaded guilty to the charge.

Gordon Caldwell, 426 Montreal, was fined $10 in Colwood magistrate's court Tuesday.

day when he pleaded guilty to being a minor in possession of alcohol.

Court was told Caldwell was checked by police while driving in Colwood July 11, and was found to have seven bottles of beer in his car.

Ronald Arthur Jones, of HMCS Naden, was fined $25 in city magistrate's court Tuesday when he pleaded guilty to being a minor in possession of alcohol.

Jones was checked by a police officer in the 700 block Yates June 27, and was found to have a part bottle of rum in his pocket.

For Building

$1,500 Donated to Y

A former YMCA secretary and his son have donated $1,500 toward the Y-building fund, it was announced Tuesday.

The fund has reached the $957,000 mark, leaving it approximately $230,000 short of the required amount.

Frank Paulding made the donation which will be used to dedicate a room in the women's wing in memory of his late wife, Frances.

He was general secretary of the Victoria YMCA from 1932 to 1946. His son Harold shares in the gift.

Mrs. Paulding was a member of the YMCA Auxiliary for 45 years until her death in 1958.

Controversial Lot Will Be Shifted

Location of the parking lot which has been a contentious point between the promoters of "Little Butchart" on the Spencer property and adjacent neighbors will be shifted to the north end of the property.

The property is high on the hill above Cook, near Summit.

Further city traffic and planning departments will be asked to study the whole issue and come up with a set of suggested regulations.

Allan Baker, lawyer for the complaining residents, Lloyd McKenzie, lawyer for the developing company, Spencer Castle and Rock Gardens Ltd., city solicitor T. P. O'Grady and city manager Dennis Young met last week to try to iron out the matter.

All four appeared before council, meeting in committee Tuesday, and a further step was taken to hammer out agreement between the disputing parties.

Mr. McKenzie said he did not think his principals would raise serious objection to moving the parking lot to the north end of the property adjacent to Arthur Street, and Mr. Baker said his clients would be delighted with the move.

Gilbey's describe how to garnish a dry martini

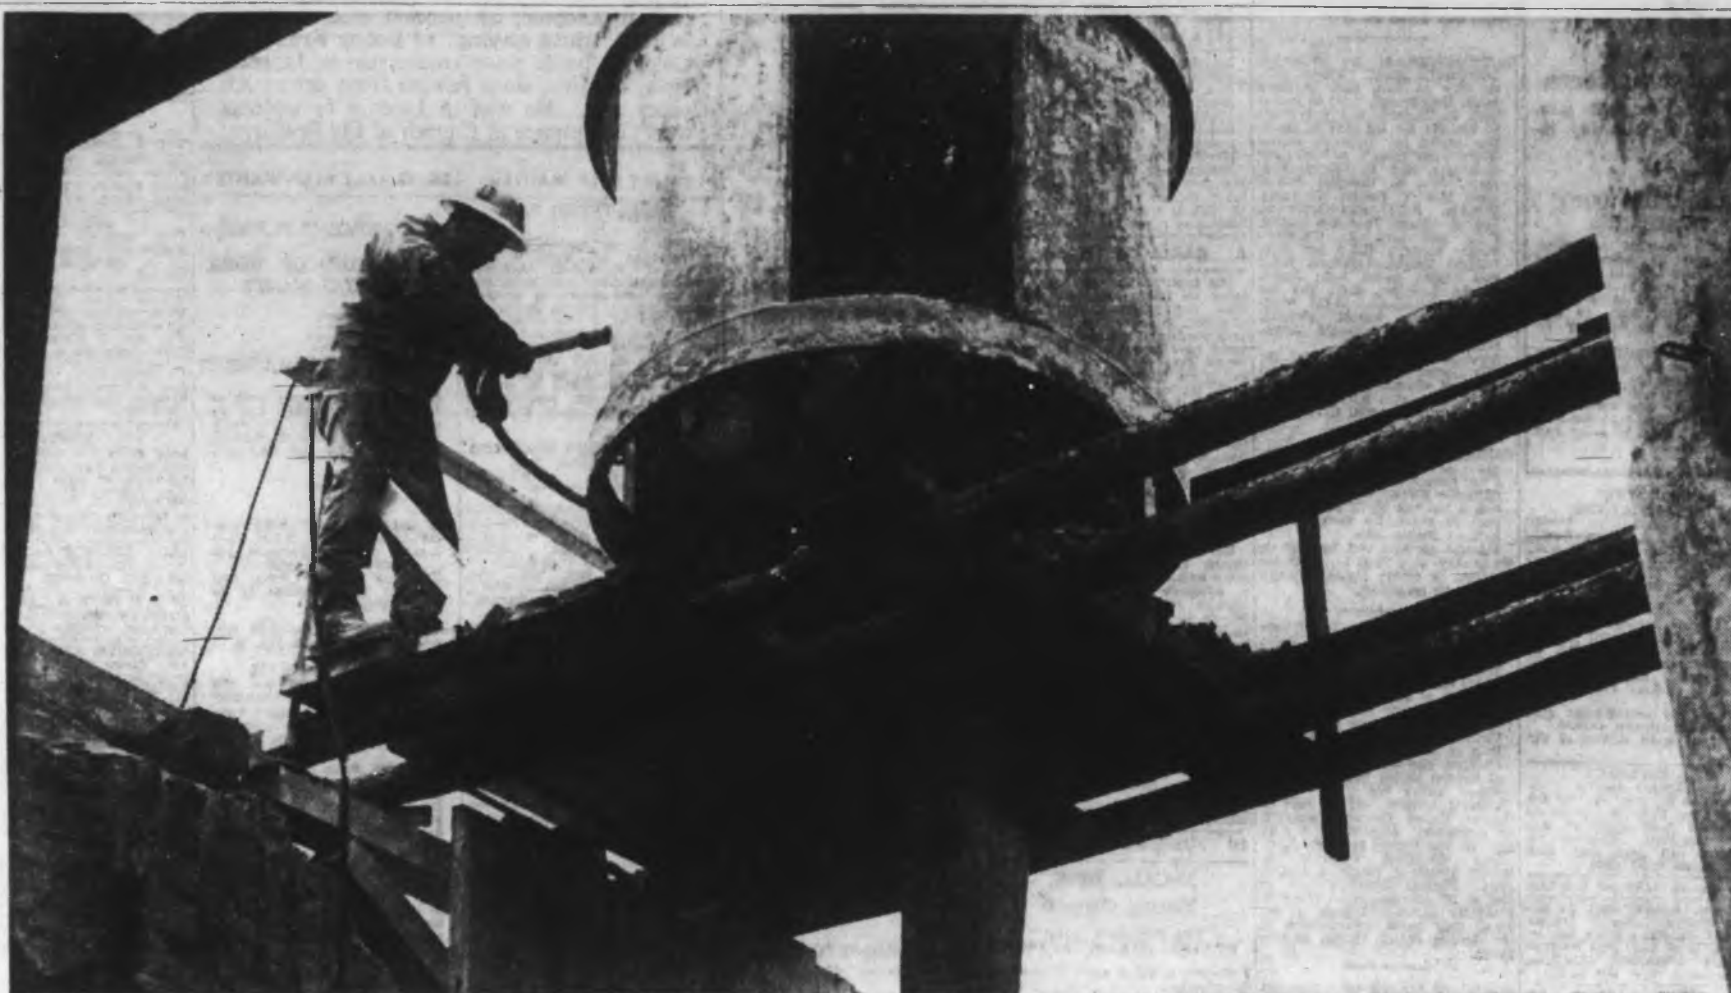

Some gins have rather strong flavouring. Others are utterly tasteless. Gilbey's London Dry has a perfect balance for the classic dry martini. A dry flavour that has been the international favourite since 1873. Quite a long time.

Since its invention the dry martini has always been graced with an olive. Very proper with the pit left in. Stuffed olives are acceptable, too.

Fine play by the British champions and the U.S.A. runners-up in the women's series of the World Bridge Olympiad gives backing to those who argue that the women's game is underrated. Women can be as subtle as the men at the bridge table as they are away from it, as two clever defenders showed on this deal from a match between European teams.
As South, how do you settle the close choice between two hearts and three spades on the second round of bidding? Here is one way to look at it: Game should be easy, and from the game standpoint it probably won't matter what you bid is. But slam, if any, may well depend on whether partner fits you in hearts. This makes two hearts the more forward-looking bid.
Both teams reached six hearts, both Wests led the diamond queen, taken in dummy. Hearts were finessed, and at one table West scored the king and successfully played on declarer's nerves by shifting to a club. This persuaded declarer to put up the ace and draw two more rounds of trumps. Now the bad spade break spelled defeat.
At the other table, West showed guile in a different way. She smoothly played low to the first round of trumps. Declarer again fell into defender's trap, taking a second trump finesse. West triumphantly produced the king and returned her last trump, thus restricting dummy to one spade ruff. This declarer was somewhat better placed than her opposite number, as she still had the club exit, but the odds favored the ruffing finesse, which lost, and again the contract went down. Thus, feminine wiles at the two tables cancelled each other out and produced a stand-off board.

first of 16 performances Monday night with every prospect of being the top financial success of the 1964 Vancouver International Festival.

Starring Judy Armstrong, Byron Mitchell and Gabriel Gascon, Irma La Douce went through the first act with evident first night reservations. But in the second the cast established a strong rapport with the full house audience in the 650-seat Queen Elizabeth Playhouse.

Miss Armstrong, a native of Nanton, Alta., and the only woman in the cast, drew warm response for her portrayal of Irma, the wayward Parisian girl whose life is disrupted by love.

Mitchell, a rising young Broadway star, showed his talent throughout.

Critics had special praise for Mr. Gascon, a well-known Montreal actor, who played the part of Bob the barman and narrator.

Satellite Wants Land Back

VIENNA (AP)—A former Romanian territory that Stalin seized during his brief alliance with Hitler appears to be a new trouble spot in strained relations between Romania and the Soviet Union.

Dispute of Reds:
Bukovina, Bessarabia

Diplomatic sources reported that the Romanians have told Moscow they would like to have Bessarabia back or at least autonomy for its Romanian population.

TRIGGER DISPUTE

The issue is said to rank high in the secret talks between Soviet leaders and the visiting Romanian premier, Ion Gheorghe Maurer, who went to Moscow more than a week ago on what was described as a friendly visit.

Diplomatic sources feel that the timing of the Romanian demand may trigger a border dispute involving the two neighbors at the height of their differences over economic integration.

The Romanians are eager to

Kooky Side Appeals to Majority

GOP Will Never Be Same

By RICHARD WILSON

SAN FRANCISCO — Winds of change have shaken the Republican party. It will never be the same again. Personalities who have dominated it for 30 years and more and who, on the whole, have tried to hold it to the middle course, are gone, forgotten or merely symbolic relics of a former time.

Nothing illustrates this more than a little reflection on who would be secretary of state in a Goldwater administration. Who would be secretary of defence? Who would be the chief advisers in a Goldwater-occu-pled White House? Or, in a Scranton administration for that matter? Scranton is so new as to be virtually unknown in the GOP organization. "I hardly know Bill," Senator Everett Dirksen once said.

The truth is that the country

as a whole "hardly knows" anybody in the Goldwater organization, either. There are a few whose names have become known — Governor Fanning of New Mexico; Denison Kitchel, the campaign manager; a hot-eyed and hard-headed 40-year-old Harvard man named Richard Kleindienst;

Dean Burch, 36-year-old Goldwater executive assistant; Clifton White, 45-year-old former college professor.

Also there are a few journalists: Bill Buckley, the fast-talking editor of the National Review; Russell Kirk, conservative lecturer and writer; Mike Bernstein, Bill Seward and other congressional investigation types; Ed Nellor, former newsman and one-time employee of radio-caster Fulton Lewis; Tony Smith, former newsman; Brent Bozell, one-time ghost-writer for the

Rockefeller in final attack

Foes Crushed

BARRY WINS FINAL TEST

SAN FRANCISCO (CP) — Backers of Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona for nomination as Republican candidate in the Nov. 3 U.S. presidential election scored a thumping victory Tuesday night when delegates rejected amendments to the party platform which would have denounced extremist groups.

This was followed by the defeat, by a vote of 897 to 409, of an amendment which would have buttressed the civil rights plank in the platform, written during the weekend.

Amid great waves of cheers and boos, the pro-Goldwater element of the party rejected by a standing vote an amendment which Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York supported with a speech, which would have written into the platform a declaration against what its sponsors described as extremist groups by name.

Both resolutions were booed and resisted by backers of Goldwater, who has refused to disown his far-right supporters. Many Goldwater backers have denounced extremism, but have objected to singling out any specific organizations.

The defeats strengthened the almost certain possibility that Goldwater will be nominated Republican presidential candidate tonight by the majority of the 1,308 voting delegates to the convention.

The amendment to which Rockefeller spoke called for the denunciation of the right-wing

John Birch Society and other extremist groups, right and left. When that went down to defeat, Governor George Romney of Michigan tried—with equal lack of success—to win adoption of a similar resolution which did not mention the specific groups by name.

Both resolutions were booed and resisted by backers of Goldwater, who has refused to disown his far-right supporters. Many Goldwater backers have denounced extremism, but have objected to singling out any specific organizations.

The defeats strengthened the almost certain possibility that Goldwater will be nominated Republican presidential candidate tonight by the majority of the 1,308 voting delegates to the convention.

The amendment to which Rockefeller spoke called for the denunciation of the right-wing talkie unit, put up an argument and broadcast a running commentary while being evicted. He was allowed to return shortly afterwards on orders from higher officials.

In a test of strength at the first session Monday, the Scranton forces were overwhelmed on a voice vote by backers of Goldwater on an issue arising from the seating of delegates.

And by what sounded like unanimous voice votes at the opening of Tuesday night's session, the delegates approved the reports of the credentials and rules committees. This clinched the preliminary victory won Monday by Goldwater forces.

Scranton Swamped

So overwhelming was the rejection that it appeared other proposed platform amendments by the pro-Scranton moderates, strong planks for Negro rights and presidential control over all nuclear weapons, also would go down to defeat.

Before the amendments to the party platform were introduced, several disturbances broke out in the Cow Palace, including the ejection of John Chancellor, a reporter for NBC-TV, who was escorted by police from the convention floor.

The incident occurred when the convention chairman ordered the aisles cleared. Chancellor, equipped with a walkie-

Overwhelming

The rules committee issue arose from a complaint that the Tennessee delegation did not this year seat a Negro who had in the past been a perennial delegate.

Scranton forces were swamped Monday when they tried to initiate a debate on the matter while the convention had before it a motion that the rules committee follow the rules used in the 1960 convention.

Tensions continued to increase between the party's moderates and conservatives as the backers of Goldwater demanded Scranton apologize for a letter he sent the senator—demanding a show-down debate and accusing Goldwater of harboring "a whole crazy-quilt collection of

One Casualty

Chaos Reigns In 'Palace'

Victoria lawyer Brian Smith is in San Francisco to attend the Republican national convention as an observer for the Young Conservatives of Canada. This is how he sees the convention.

By BRIAN SMITH

Monday the convention opened at the Cow Palace—an enormous hangar about three times the size of the Victoria arena.

The main floor of the Cow Palace acts as a crude parliamentary floor for the convention. Facing the elevated rostrum are the rows of seats for the 1,308 voting delegates. Arranged in blocs under their state banners.

This convention floor area looks like a gigantic stock exchange. Delegates and alternates roam between state delegations, read newspapers, or carry on their individual press conferences.

We could look down from our seats in the gallery tonight and see Jackie Robinson arguing with Louisiana delegates. On another part of the floor, Barry Goldwater Jr. was vainly trying to elude an ABC television cameraman.

A group of Puerto Rican delegates was trying to hoist its banner in front of television cameras and there was at least one camera casualty when two newsmen crossed cables and collided. All the time this is going on, governors, congressmen and lists of routine speakers drone away to an unlistening audience.

I am sure that the press representatives here and their legion of technical assistants must outnumber the delegates and the press has been given almost as much space on the Cow Palace floor as the delegates. The three major American television networks have enormous operation units at the Cow Palace and provide lounge areas for delegates.

We have seen Huntley and Brinkley wandering about and we noticed George Goebel on display at the Xerox Centre where he appears to be advertising copying machines.

Our own CBC has a small but talented operation in a cubby hole at the Cow Palace which is ably manned by James Minifie and Knowlton Nash. The CBC people have been kind to us.

The American convention is a parliamentary-type body which meets only once in four years for a period of one week. This means that delegate continuity between conventions is not great.

In our country most national party conventions are held annually or every two years so that a group of perpetual delegates can more easily dominate the convention.

These convention differences between our two countries help to explain why the Goldwater forces have been able to win such full control of this convention in a period of four years.

The old eastern Republican forces, so long in control at these conventions, are today, a dispirited minority.

Tuesday night's session of the convention has given us General Eisenhower, who delivered a plea for party unity which aggravated no

Top-Level Soviet Shuffle Sees Brezhnev Moving Up

MOSCOW (AP)—First Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan will soon replace Leonid I. Brezhnev as Soviet president, informed Soviet sources said Tuesday.

Brezhnev, a likely successor to Premier Khrushchev, was reported being relieved of the ceremonial title of president so he can concentrate on his key jobs in the Communist party, the source of power.

PRESIDENT SOON

Mikoyan, an old Bolshevik high in the party and government since early in the Stalin era and now a confidant of Khrushchev, will become president in the next few days, the informants added.

The sources said the changes will be announced within the next few days at a joint session of the Supreme Soviet, the country's parliament, now in summer session in the Kremlin.

SKEPTICISM

Another report, received with more scepticism, said Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko will be replaced this autumn by Alexei Adzhubel, Khrushchev's 40-year-old son-in-law who is editor of the government newspaper Izvestia.

Mikoyan, 68, Khrushchev's travelling troubleshooter, has asked for easier work than his present position as a first deputy premier, one well-informed diplomat said.

TOO BUSY

Brezhnev, 57, has been too busy lately to attend to many of the protocol requirements of his presidential role.

But the large, solidly built Communist has been very busy with party affairs. He is both a member of the presidium of the party, which guides it, and a secretary of the party's central committee.

BEIR APPARENT

Brezhnev now is widely assumed to be the heir apparent of the 70-year-old Khrushchev. But some observers do not overlook the name of Nikolai V. Podgorny, who also became a party secretary in June, 1963, or the possibility that an outsider might emerge.

Somewhat aloof-looking and a metallurgist by profession, Brezhnev has a common touch but lacks the folksy friendliness of Khrushchev.

Negroes Condemn Platform

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Negro Republicans attending the 1964 convention issued a "statement of principles" Tuesday night supporting Gov. William Scranton and condemning the "lily white" GOP platform.

They said they would stay in the party but would not support Sen. Barry Goldwater if he is the party standard-bearer.

Paul Takes Buttering-Up with Salt

Fan Club Across the Aisle

OTTAWA (CP) — Would Paul Martin have made a better prime minister than Lester Pearson, the man who beat him for the Liberal leadership in 1958?

The Progressive Conservatives seem to think he would. Twice they have tossed him verbal bouquets this week for his handling of the job of acting prime minister in the absence of Mr. Pearson at the Commonwealth conference.

Mr. Martin has accepted the words as doubtful compliments, unsought if not unappreciated.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker gave Mr. Martin the first bouquet when the government brought in its student loans legislation under an agreement with opposition parties to forego the opening debate. (See story on Page 3.)

"I must say that since the secretary of state for external affairs has been acting prime minister, as a result of his attitude there has been a remarkable improvement in reactions generally," Mr. Diefenbaker remarked in the Commons.

Conservative House Leader Gordon Churchill followed this up Tuesday by asking Mr. Martin:

"In view of his steadily increasing authority in the absence of the prime minister, would he use his influence now to have the main (spending) estimates brought before the House for examination?"

By this time, Mr. Martin seemed to think the game had gone far enough. To Mr. Churchill, he said:

"My honorable friend was good enough and generous enough to pay me a left-handed compliment. But he will not misunderstand me if I say that the authority of whoever is presiding over this House as acting prime minister is, of course, second to that of the prime minister who is now engaged in very important business outside the country."

"I want to make it clear that his authority has been properly asserted and, I am sure, widely respected."

VIEWS of SPORT

By Red Smith

During the British Open of 1960, two Yanks came out of an alley called Granny Clark's Wynd and climbed the steep streets of St. Andrews to the churchyard on the cliff's edge at the top of the town. On the rocks far below, the North Sea pounded itself to foam. A light morning rain was increasing, but in the churchyard an old tad was edging the turf bordering the gravel walks.

"Could you direct us," one of the tourists said, "to Tommy Morris' grave?"

"Ya want to see the hole-in-one," the old gaffer said. "Yonder in the corner."

In its first 12 years, the British Open was won eight times by the Morris, senior and junior. When young Tommy died in his early 20s—of a broken heart, says the indestructible legend—he had been champion four times in a row.

His resting place may be the only one with a headstone depicting the sleeper at play. Set into the churchyard wall, the stone shows Tommy addressing his ball.

Back at the Royal and Ancient Club later, Willie Allison was encountered. Willie is a big, amiable Scot who covers sports for a Glasgow newspaper.

"We've just been up to visit Tommy's grave," a guy said. "Ah, have ye now?" Willie said. "Bawby Jones was there, and Walter Hagen. Laid a wreath on the grave."

"A wreath?" the Yank said. "I should have thought the least Walter would do is break a bottle of champagne over it."

"No," Willie said, "he only breathed on it and the ghost of Tommy went gleglin' off it the night."

Scots 'Adopt' Lema

Last week the bubbly did flow in the old grey town, for Champagne Tony Lema was there, slapping the Old Course around as few have ever done since the courtiers of the Virgin Queen were batting a pouch of feathers over the dunes between the Firth of Forth and the Firth of Tay.

Instead of standing aghast at the outlander's disrespect of the Old Lady, the Scots took laughing Tony to their hearts. The tournament was just beginning when The Associated Press reported that Lema on his first visit abroad seemed to be gaining a personal popularity rivaling that of Arnold Palmer, whose picture hangs in many Scottish homes.

When he ran a seven-iron through the Valley of Sin and up to the cup on the last hole, coppers had to hack a path through his admirers so that he could reach the green for the putt that won the championship by five strokes.

Maybe it was a case of opposite attracting opposite. "I'm third in money winning," Tony told the crowd, "and first in money spending." To the canny Caledonians, he marked himself right there as a creature from another planet, some kind of god or something.

Salute to His Caddy

Prize money was $4,200 and out of this Tony gave Tip Anderson $1,000, or 36 times the standard caddy fee. "I couldn't have won without him," he said of Anderson, who carried Palmer's bag when Arnold won the Open at Royal Birkdale and at Troon. "He put the right club in my hand and somehow knew I was going to hit it."

No gesture could have delighted the Scots more. At one stroke, Lema made obeisance to the perils of the Old Course with its blind greens, fairway hillocks and huge pot bunkers, and saluted the sagacity of St. Andrew's ancient caddies who are familiar with the Old Lady's treachery.

"The first time I played there," Paul Runyan has recalled, "my caddy would say, 'Ye'll want to be clear of Swilken Burn just left of yonder whins.' It didn't look like the proper line to me. I hit farther left and looked at my caddy. 'Ye'r in the Bishop's Nose,' he said."

Tony listened to Tip and profited. Then he paid him off and headed for Paris—to see a champagne firm about getting the stuff wholesale.

Vancouver Laces New Westminster

Vancouver	23	15	0	2	2	20	81
VICTORIA	22	11	0	1	1	18	78
Nanaimo	22	3	13	0	1	23	6

Last night's score: New Westminster 13, Vancouver 12. Next game: tonight—Nanaimo at VICTORIA.

VANCOUVER — Vancouver's Canadian champions, backed once again by brilliant defence, handed New Westminster its worst beating of the season, 13-5, here last night to move within one point of the leaders in the Inter-City Lacrosse League.

Catching New Westminster without scoring ace Cliff Sepka, Vancouver held their cross-town rivals to 22 shots with a defence that has allowed only 25 goals in its last five games.

Only men they couldn't stop were Paul Parnell, who took over the league scoring lead with two goals and three assists, and Bill Wilkes, who scored three times and set up Parnell on the other two.

Gordie Gimble and Sid Warick each scored four goals for Vancouver.

Rocks Seeking Clincher

Victoria Shamrocks, preferring to worry about one thing at a time, go out against Nanaimo tonight at Memorial Arena to clinch a playoff spot in the Inter-City Lacrosse League.

Two points for Shamrocks would make official what has been almost a foregone conclusion for weeks—Nanaimo to finish last, with the other three clubs going on to playoffs. But Shamrocks aren't taking anything for granted, and would prefer to settle it tonight.

Rocks go into the game without the injured Ron Jay and vacationing Ed Kowalyk, but still have Bill Munroe and Don Ashbee back in the line-up. They are also calling up Lonnie Restall from the senior "B" league. Game time is 8 p.m.

Big Night for Day

Calgary Romps Over Montreal, 35-7

MONTREAL (CP) — Calgary Stampede romped to an easy 35-7 win over Montreal Alouettes in a Canadian Football League pre-season exhibition game Tuesday night before 18,658 fans.

Led by first-string quarterback Eagle Day and halfback Mike Davis with two touchdowns each, the Stampede outclassed the Alouettes in every department, scoring in every quarter.

Other Calgary point-getters were halfback Jim Dillard with a touchdown and punter Larry Robinson with a single and three converts.

Marv Luster, Als' lanky flanker who was fumbling passes all over the field, recovered late in the second quarter to gather in a 23-yard touchdown pass from rookie George Bork. Gino Berretta's convert ended the Montreal scoring for the night.

Day, who did the lion's share of the quarterbacking for Calgary, completed 11 of 16 passes for 137 yards. But it was in ground rushing where the Stampede shone, outstriking the Als 253 yards to 58. The Als got 209 yards in the air, compared to 224 by the westerners.

Bork, the Illinois rookie being tested for the first time in professional football, polished off 15 of 20 passes for 153 yards and was easily the Montreal standout of the game.

The Stampede, who seemed to be able to score almost at will, also used Jerry Keeling and punter Robinson at quarter.

Montreal's other signal callers, Warren Rabb and Jerry Fields, also saw action.

Dixon charged at husky Charley Brown who neatly flipped him over his shoulder in judo style.

The only interception was of a Bork pass, intended for Hugh Rohrschneider and grabbed by Don Stephenson.

Lovell Coleman, who rushed for 71 yards on the ground, was a standout for Calgary, his 33-yard dash through five Alouette defenders in the third quarter set up one of Day's touchdowns.

Fouts Rejoins Lions
Ottawa's Move Next

VANCOUVER — B.C. Lions go, and got the news that Dick Fouts, all-star defensive end, will play this season as a Canadian and a new import citizenship is approved in Ottawa.

Fouts, whose reluctance to make his citizenship move until he had received assurance of job security from the Lions has been widely publicized, appeared before a citizenship court in Vancouver yesterday and had his formal application approved.

His application now goes to Ottawa for final approval.

"There was never any question of finances connected with this negotiation," general manager Herb Capozzi of the Lions said after Fouts had agreed to make immediate application.

"It was merely a question of job security from Fouts' viewpoint. We have made it possible for him to have such security."

Capozzi said Fouts, who had been previously signed to a two-year contract, had received a four-year contract but would not disclose financial details or say whether Fouts would receive more money.

Dropped from the squad yesterday were Donnie Davis, a competent-looking end from Southern University; Jim Randle, a defensive-halfback, and Morley Rohlsner, a guard from University of Washington who was qualified to play as a Canadian under Canadian Football League rules.

Als Court Roach Engineer Trade

MONTREAL — Montreal Alouettes, still searching hard for the quarterback to replace Sam Etcheverry, yesterday acquired a prospect in a four-player trade with Winnipeg Blue Bombers and created speculation that the fellow who may eventually get the job will be John Roach, 31-year-old second-string quarterback for Green Bay Packers last season.

Getting a chance in the Montreal sweepstakes is Vernon Cole, who tried out with the Bombers two years ago and then went into the U.S. Army for a two-year hitch.

The 26-year-old West Texas State grad went to the Alouettes along with Doug Daignault, a 25-year-old Canadian defensive halfback who was traded to the Bombers last year by Ottawa Rough Riders.

In exchange, the Alouettes gave up Barrie Hansen, 22-year-old defensive halfback, and Harvey Lee, 24-year-old utility lineman, both are Canadians.

Roach, who retired after last season, was put on the Montreal negotiation list in case the veteran could be persuaded to take another fling at professional football.

Roach has a good job as a salesman in Dallas and would have to be waived by all 14 National Football League clubs if he was to play for Alouettes this season. He would be a free agent next season.

However, speculation arose when Roach arrived in Montreal this week for the announced purpose of having him work for a week with the Alouettes' five quarterback hopes.

"I'm still under contract with the NFL," Roach answered when asked if he might play for the Alouettes, "so that eliminates anything along that line."

"But," he added, "I would have to meet any opportunity that came along. Right now, I've got a fine job in Dallas and I'm happy there."

Easier Tariff For Ball Park

City council will probably modify its charges for use of Royal Athletic Park. It will continue to take 10 per cent of the gross gate in events where an admission fee is charged but will forego the charges for ticket salesmen and takers.

This decision is a switch on the part of council which, not long ago, declared that it was adamantly going to hold to the 10 per cent plus $4 a game for ticket takers and $5 a game for salesmen.

Several alternatives were considered Tuesday during a council meeting, including the suggestion that the athletic field be given free and the sporting organizations be asked to seek grants from the intermunicipal committee.

Yankees Win, 4-3
Cut Orioles' Lead

Tom Tresh bloomed a run-scoring single in the eighth inning and Al Downing struck out Norm Siebern with bases loaded in the ninth inning last night as New York Yankees cut Baltimore Orioles' American League lead to half a game with a 4-3 victory at New York.

It was the opening game of a three-game set for the league lead, and it proved another indication that the Orioles may be in trouble at last.

JINX SCORE

Through most of the season they have clung stubbornly to the lead on their ability to win the close ones. Up until Sunday they had won 21 of 23 games that were decided by one run, but they lost, 4-3, to Detroit Sunday, lost to the Tigers by the same score Monday, and again 4-3 to the Yanks last night.

Downing won his fourth in a row, bringing his record to 6-2 with a six-hitter. Milt Pappas and Stu Miller also limited the Yanks to six hits, two by Tresh. Trailing, 3-2, in the seventh, Orioles tied it up on two walks and a single by Bob Johnson, who set an American League record with his sixth consecutive pinch-hit single. Mickey Mantle scored the winner in the eighth on a walk, sacrifice and Tresh's single.

Chicago White Sox also gained on the Orioles, moving to within one and one-half games of the lead with a 4-2 win over Boston Red Sox.

OTHER GAMES

In other games, Minnesota Twins beat Washington, 5-0, getting home run No. 32 from Harmon Killebrew; Cleveland Indians outgunned Kansas City, 9-7, and Detroit beat Los Angeles Angels, 4-3.

San Francisco Giants and Philadelphia Phillies both lost in the National League last night.

Passing Driver

Long Licence Loss Courtenay Warning

COURTENAY — "In my opinion," said Magistrate John Ryland, "you have not learned your responsibility and, if you commit an offence again, you may lose your licence for a long time."

DOUBLE LINE

He was speaking in magistrate's court to Dwight Donald Prowse, who was charged with passing two cars on a double solid line.

Prowse had been convicted July 7 of speeding but did not receive a licence suspension because of his work as a truck driver. This time he was fined $40 and given a 30-day suspension.

Ronald Douglas Patterson, who pleaded guilty to impaired driving, was fined $125 and given a three-month licence suspension.

1,000 Acres

Saltair Site Eyed For New Prison

The government is considering about 1,000 acres of crown land at Saltair, between Ladysmith and Chemainus, as the site for a new provincial medium security prison.

Attorney-General Bonner said Tuesday the requirements now under examination are that the site should be sufficiently remote from private homes and commercial enterprises but still have easy access.

The new jail, for which a construction start is planned before March, 1965, will be similar to existing forest camps and eventually will house about 200 prisoners, mostly from Vancouver Island.

Capital cost of the project will be kept "quite modest," the attorney-general said, by plans to provide accommodation for only a few inmates initially. The prisoners will build the remainder of the new quarters.

DUNCAN—A membership vote of the big Duncan-Nanaimo IWA local went 90 per cent in favor of a $1 a month assessment of the local's 4,000 members, officials said Tuesday.

The assessment will be for Alberni Valley unionists idled by the recent office strike and the vote occurred before the strike ended. As a result, there will be only one dollar assessment this month.

NANAIMO—Mayor Pete Maffeo and city council will go on their annual tour of the harbor today with members of the harbor commission. The two groups will travel in a private boat to Harmae, back along the harbor and then to the Departure Bay area.

DUNCAN—The annual SPCA fund-raising garden party will begin at 7 p.m. today at the Glenora area home of Miss Mary Waldron. Entertainment will include ballet dancers and a singer.

COURTENAY—Arlington Preston Luttrell of Linwood, Calif., received cuts and bruises and his wife suffered arm and leg injuries early Tuesday when their car left a road near here and hit a power pole and fence. Police said the driver tried to pass a car, found another was overtaking him and swung back too far. Damage to the Luttrell car was $1,600.

DUNCAN—William J. Ashlee of Duncan was fined $100 in magistrate's court Tuesday after pleading guilty to two charges of assaulting his wife, one charge involving the pouring of tomato juice over her head. He was ordered to post a $500 bond to keep the peace for a year. A Victoria juvenile was put on 18 months' probation, given a curfew and placed in the custody of his grandparents after admitting two car thefts and a break-in at a summer home.

NANAIMO—Children of four local playgrounds will stage a circus in Bowen Park at 2 p.m. Friday. Events will include a costume parade.

PORT ALBERNI—Doug Green of Marble Canyon Logging, charged with theft of a log from Hamilton Logging, has pleaded not guilty and elected trial by judge without jury. No trial date has been set.

Keen-Eared Billy Leaves Woes On the Doorstep

NANAIMO (CP)—"People always ask me how I do it," says William (Billy) Lewis, who will be 101 Friday.

"I would say moderation—and don't take your troubles home with you."

"I came here in 1875. I've seen a lot of changes. Nanaimo was Coaltown. Vancouver was nothing—it was Gastown in those days."

"When the president of the United States died last year, everybody in the world heard about it within half an hour. I started thinking how much communication has changed. When I first came here, there was one boat a week from Victoria."

Mr. Lewis will have a quiet birthday celebration this year. The honors on his centenary last year were tiring.

Ministers Support Doctors' Campaign

NANAIMO (CP) — Three leading city ministers Tuesday gave their support to the campaign of Nanaimo doctors, led by Dr. J. R. Howey, against teen-age promiscuity.

Rev. R. B. Cochrane of the Presbyterian church said: "I'll stand right behind Dr. Howey. He's got the kind of guts needed in this community."

CERTIFICATE URGED

He added: "I feel everyone getting married should have to present to the minister a doctor's certificate stating the person doesn't have VD."

The United Church's Rev. Chris Jack said the blame for the low standards of teen-age conduct lies mostly with parents, but "the church is at fault in that it hasn't been outspoken enough."

Books and films have led children to believe sex and brutality is normal, he said.

Rev. W. C. Irvine, Pentecostal, said the solution to the problem lies in a closer relationship between the church and the home. Children should not be allowed to go steady until they reach the age of 18, he said, and the marriage age should be set at 21. Rt. Rev. Msgr. A. G. Baker, Roman Catholic, declined comment.

Janitors Want Board
To Review Grievance

COURTENAY—School district janitors have asked for a provincial Labor Relations Board officer to review a grievance, the school board disclosed at its regular meeting Monday night.

The meeting also learned the provincial education department has turned down some of the plans in a recent school referendum.

The janitors are protesting the appointment of George Martyn as head janitor at Lake Trail school over another union member with seniority over Mr. Martyn.

It was learned a grievance committee from the union met the board last week. The janitors said seniority must come first, while the board felt seniority counts if all other things are equal.

The education department turned down requests for a new classroom at Royston school and four extra rooms in Courtenay senior high.

SHARE COSTS

It also said the cost of school board offices and new kindergartens must be shared.

Approved requests include:

Courtenay Elementary, two rooms and a covered play area; Glacier View, one room and an activity room; Lake Trail, one room and changes in the home economics and industrial arts rooms; Black Creek, one room and an activity room; Brooklyn, activity room; Comox Elementary, four rooms; Cumberland High, renovations to make it an elementary school.

SKETCH PLANS

Sketch plans of the new Cumberland junior secondary school were shown to a delegation from the Cumberland action committee, which greeted them with pleasure.

Several annual grants were approved:

Chamber of Commerce, $642 including taxes; Girl Guides, $25; Cowichan music festival, $25; Salvation Army, $25; plowing match, $50, and Cowichan exhibition board, $500.

Another grant to the Island Publicity Bureau will be announced later. It will match any amount the Chamber of Commerce raises, up to $500.

Council learned building permit values are way up. June figures were $24,850 this year and $4,150 last year; six-month totals were $410,650 this year and $178,891 last year.

Ragwort
Killer
Thriving

NANAIMO—More than 2,000 cinabar moths introduced in the Extension district a month ago to fight tansy ragwort are "thriving," Joseph Garner said Tuesday.

Mr. Garner is chairman of the weed control committee set up by the Cedar Farmers' Institute early this year to fight the poisonous weed, which is known to be a cattle killer.

He said there is a small amount of control now, but success or failure won't be certain until spring. However, he added, results so far are "quite encouraging."

MEETING

Mr. Campbell said he is willing to support the amalgamation move at a public meeting held in the area before voting day.

Mayor Hammer said the recent tidal wave disaster and the long mill strike had a lot to do with the merger decision.

"We are doing so many things jointly," said Mayor Bishop. "There is no guarantee, however, this sort of co-operation will continue indefinitely. It depends on goodwill."

Mayor Bishop said the joint services proposed by the government is "only half a loaf."

Port Alberni with a population of 12,000 and Alberni with 5,000 would make the unit B.C.'s fifth largest city.

Mr. Campbell said of the mayors: "We think they should be commended for showing outstanding leadership in taking the initiative."

DUNCAN — It wouldn't be fair to the dogs, says local SPCA inspector J. A. Gelsvik, but he and some aides could clean Duncan of stray animals in two weeks if the city leash bylaw was followed to the letter.

He had been invited to the city council meeting Monday night to discuss SPCA problems, and discuss he did.

Mr. Gelsvik said his area embraces the area between Mill Bay and Chemainus and the city gets more service than other communities in the area.

With the leash bylaw and possibly the assistance of two men, he said, he could end the problem within 14 days, but he admitted this would pose a hardship on all dogs.

The inspector said some citizens complain about their neighbor's dog because they don't like the neighbor.

He said he sometimes meets hostility when he has to pick up a dog, especially when it belongs to a child. Of children, he said, "I can't take away their dogs."

Mr. Gelsvik said he received 10 calls in less than an hour recently about a dead dog on Trunk Road. When he got there, the animal was still on the road—nobody had even bothered to move it to the side.

He proposed a fee increase to $10 for female dogs and $5 for males and spayed females.

Council made no decision on his proposals and assured Mr. Gelsvik he had not been invited to be criticized.

Aldermen agreed he is doing an excellent job and added the public would appreciate his problems if they knew more about them.

'Dirty, Unsanitary'
Port Hospital Charge

PORT ALBERNI—A claim of "unsanitary and deplorable conditions" in West Coast General Hospital will be investigated by city council, aldermen decided Monday night.

A citizens' petition which has been signed by 2,450 people made the claim while urging hospital expansion. The aldermen made it clear they are unanimous in support of the expansion but cannot countenance the claim.

The busy council meeting also:

● Started recreation projects approved in a plebiscite in April by awarding three contracts, all to outside firms, and hiring people to plan eight other jobs.

● Heard city finances are in good shape despite the recently-ended strike.

A letter from the citizens' committee which drew up the hospital petition for presentation to Health Minister Martin asked council to endorse the petition.

In addition to its charges about conditions, the petition urges the opening of the fourth floor of West Coast General as a children's ward and protests "the acute shortage of nursing staff."

Ald. Bob Dalton fired back: "The charges in that petition are hard to take. I've always been under the impression we have a very well run hospital. We shouldn't put our name to these claims if they are not true."

Expansion Backed

He said council supports expansion but should not endorse the petition without investigation.

Ald. William Goddard, council's representative on the hospital board, told of progress in efforts to open the fourth floor.

Ald. Howard McLean, an elected member of the hospital board, said remarks he made at a recent meeting were being misinterpreted and added flatly he is not opposed to the expansion project.

Ald. Jack Perry said: "It seems amazing that so many people would sign a document worded in that manner. I don't believe there are unsanitary and deplorable conditions."

Council then agreed with Ald. Dalton and voted for an investigation of the charges before endorsing the petition.

Biggest of the recreation contracts which were accepted was a $31,000 bid by Conniston Construction Co. of Vancouver to develop Tenth Avenue Park.

The others are a $21,394 tender from Dafeo Metalcrete Floor Ltd. of Willowdale, Ont., to supply and install concrete slab and terrazzo topping in the arena, and a $5,415 bid by Western Reinforcing Steel Service Ltd. of Vancouver to supply and install steel.

Reynolds Praised

Phil Stroyan, of Vancouver, has been engaged to prepare plans for the arena floor, Tenth Avenue grounds, arena parking lot and swimming pool filter system.

Calberg and Jackson will draw up plans for arena seating, skaters' lounge, Tenth Avenue field and ticket booth.

Parks chairman Ald. Garnet Reynolds said 75 per cent of the recreation program has either been started or is on the drawing board. He drew an official "well done" from Mayor Les Hammer on the progress in the program.

Finance chairman Perry gave the good financial news, that tax collections of $1,840,606 this year are 95.95 per cent of the total levy. This is favorable compared to other municipalities and higher than comparative figures here in the past two years, despite the strike.

"I had been concerned in case the strike would affect collections," he said. "But Mr. (city clerk-controller Dennis) Thain predicted the strike would help ... he was right."

"It just doesn't make sense," said Mayor Hammer, "but we won't complain."

Council endorsed the finance committee's investment of $500,000 in short-term bonds from the general account surplus.

Ald. Perry said the investment would bring slightly more interest than if the funds were left in the bank. The money still is available if needed next year.

Supports Alberni's Move

Campbell Favors Merger

Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell said Tuesday he is 100 per cent behind the plan to amalgamate the twin cities of Alberni and Port Alberni.

Mayors Leslie Hammer and Fred Bishop arrived in Victoria for talks with the minister only hours after the two councils decided to support amalgamation and put it to a vote Oct. 17.

MEETING

Mr. Campbell said he is willing to support the amalgamation move at a public meeting held in the area before voting day.

Mayor Hammer said the recent tidal wave disaster and the long mill strike had a lot to do with the merger decision.

"We are doing so many things jointly," said Mayor Bishop. "There is no guarantee, however, this sort of co-operation will continue indefinitely. It depends on goodwill."

Mayor Bishop said the joint services proposed by the government is "only half a loaf."

Port Alberni with a population of 12,000 and Alberni with 5,000 would make the unit B.C.'s fifth largest city.

Mr. Campbell said of the mayors: "We think they should be commended for showing outstanding leadership in taking the initiative."

Boards to Study Island College

COURTENAY — Nanaimo, Courtenay and Campbell River school board members will meet next week to discuss the often-proposed community college, local trustees learned Monday.

The Nanaimo board has hired a UBC staff member to survey the island from Cowichan to Qualicum, including Port Alberni, to see if a college would be feasible.

A population of 100,000 is usually regarded as a minimum for a college and the meeting will decide if the north Island should be included in the survey.

Newcastle Forgotten

NANAIMO — Tourist industry officials and the provincial government were blasted Tuesday by a businessman and an alderman for doing nothing to develop the park potential of Newcastle Island.

"They're not doing a blessed thing over there," said Ald. Bus MacDonald of the government.

"They haven't even got a telephone over there this year."

Reg Moffat of Nanaimo, who conducted an extensive survey on the economic effect on trailer tourists on Vancouver Island, said the tourist industry is "missing the greatest bet Nanaimo ever had."

recreation department before making any announcements.

Ald. MacDonald said the distance from the ferry landing to the island's campsite is too far for people carrying a load of camping equipment.

He suggests a jitney service or a landing barge which would land near the campsite and "then you would get people to go over there and stay."

SURVEY TAKEN

Mr. Moffat said a survey of trailer parks between Courtenay and Campbell River showed trailer owners there had an average income of $450,000 a month.

It also indicated more than 350 trailer owners who arrived as tourists settled permanently and spend about $100,000 a month.

"If the city heard of an industry wanted to start in this area with a payroll of $500,000," he said, "they would turn upside down to get that industry in here."

NEAR WATER

Mr. Moffat, a district manager for an insurance firm, said trailer tourists want to be close to boat launching sites.

"You have to have a place on the seashore for trailers," he said.

"Fishing is what they're interested in ... that's what brings them and that's what keeps them ... and the fishing around here is as good as any other place on this coast."

ONLY PLACE

Mr. Moffat said Newcastle Island is the only suitable place around Nanaimo for a trailer park, and urged a causeway that would open at certain tides to let boats through Newcastle Channel as an ideal solution to the problem of getting trailer tourists to the island.

He estimated the cost would not be exorbitant.

Chamber of Commerce president Richard Bond said he favors a trailer park and boat launching ramp on the island, and indicated the chamber supports the move for a bridge.

Car Charge Laid

Two men arrested Monday for possession of a stolen car were remanded without plea to Friday when they appeared in Colwood magistrate's court Tuesday.

Richard Gordon Gray, 31, of Vancouver, and Michael Dennis Coates, 20, of Magna Bay, Shuswap Lake, were checked by a Colwood RCMP constable at a Malahat restaurant Monday when he noticed a car answering the description of a stolen June 2 in North Surrey.

Two other people in the car at the time were not involved in the charge.

A 30-30 rifle was also found in the car.

A man charged with shooting a '22 rifle without a permit was fined $10 in Colwood magistrate's court Tuesday.

Leonard Creed, 2927 Shelbourne, was checked by Colwood RCMP on the Victoria Fish and Game Club grounds June 10, where he was firing the rifle into the bush in company with a juvenile.

He pleaded guilty to the charge.

Gordon Caldwell, 426 Montreal, was fined $10 in Colwood magistrate's court Tuesday.

day when he pleaded guilty to being a minor in possession of alcohol.

Court was told Caldwell was checked by police while driving in Colwood July 11, and was found to have seven bottles of beer in his car.

Ronald Arthur James, of HMCS Naden, was fined $25 in city magistrate's court Tuesday when he pleaded guilty to being a minor in possession of alcohol.

James was checked by a police officer in the 700 block Yates June 27, and was found to have a part bottle of rum in his pocket.

$1,500 Donated to Y

A former YMCA secretary donated $1,500 toward the Y building fund, it was announced Tuesday.

Frank Paulding made the donation which will be used to dedicate a room in the women's wing in memory of his late wife, Frances.

He was general secretary of the Victoria YMCA from 1932 to 1946.

Mrs. Paulding was a member of the YMCA Auxiliary for 45 years until her death in 1958.

The fund has reached the $957,000 mark, leaving it approximately $230,000 short of the required amount.

Controversial Lot Will Be Shifted

Location of the parking lot which has been a contentious point between the promoters of "Little Butchart" on the Spencer property and adjacent neighbors will be shifted to the north end of the property.

The property is high on the hill above Cook, near Summit.

Further city traffic and planning departments will be asked to study the whole issue and come up with a set of suggested regulations.

Allan Baker, lawyer for the complaining residents, Lloyd McKenzie, lawyer for the developing company, Spencer Castle and Rock Gardens Ltd., city solicitor T. P. O'Grady and city manager Dennis Young met last week to try to iron out the matter.

All four appeared before council, meeting in committee Tuesday, and a further step was taken to hammer out agreement between the disputing parties.

Mr. McKenzie said he did not think his principals would raise serious objection to moving the parking lot to the north end of the property adjacent to Arthur Street, and Mr. Baker said his clients would be delighted with the move.

Gilbey's describe how to garnish a dry martini

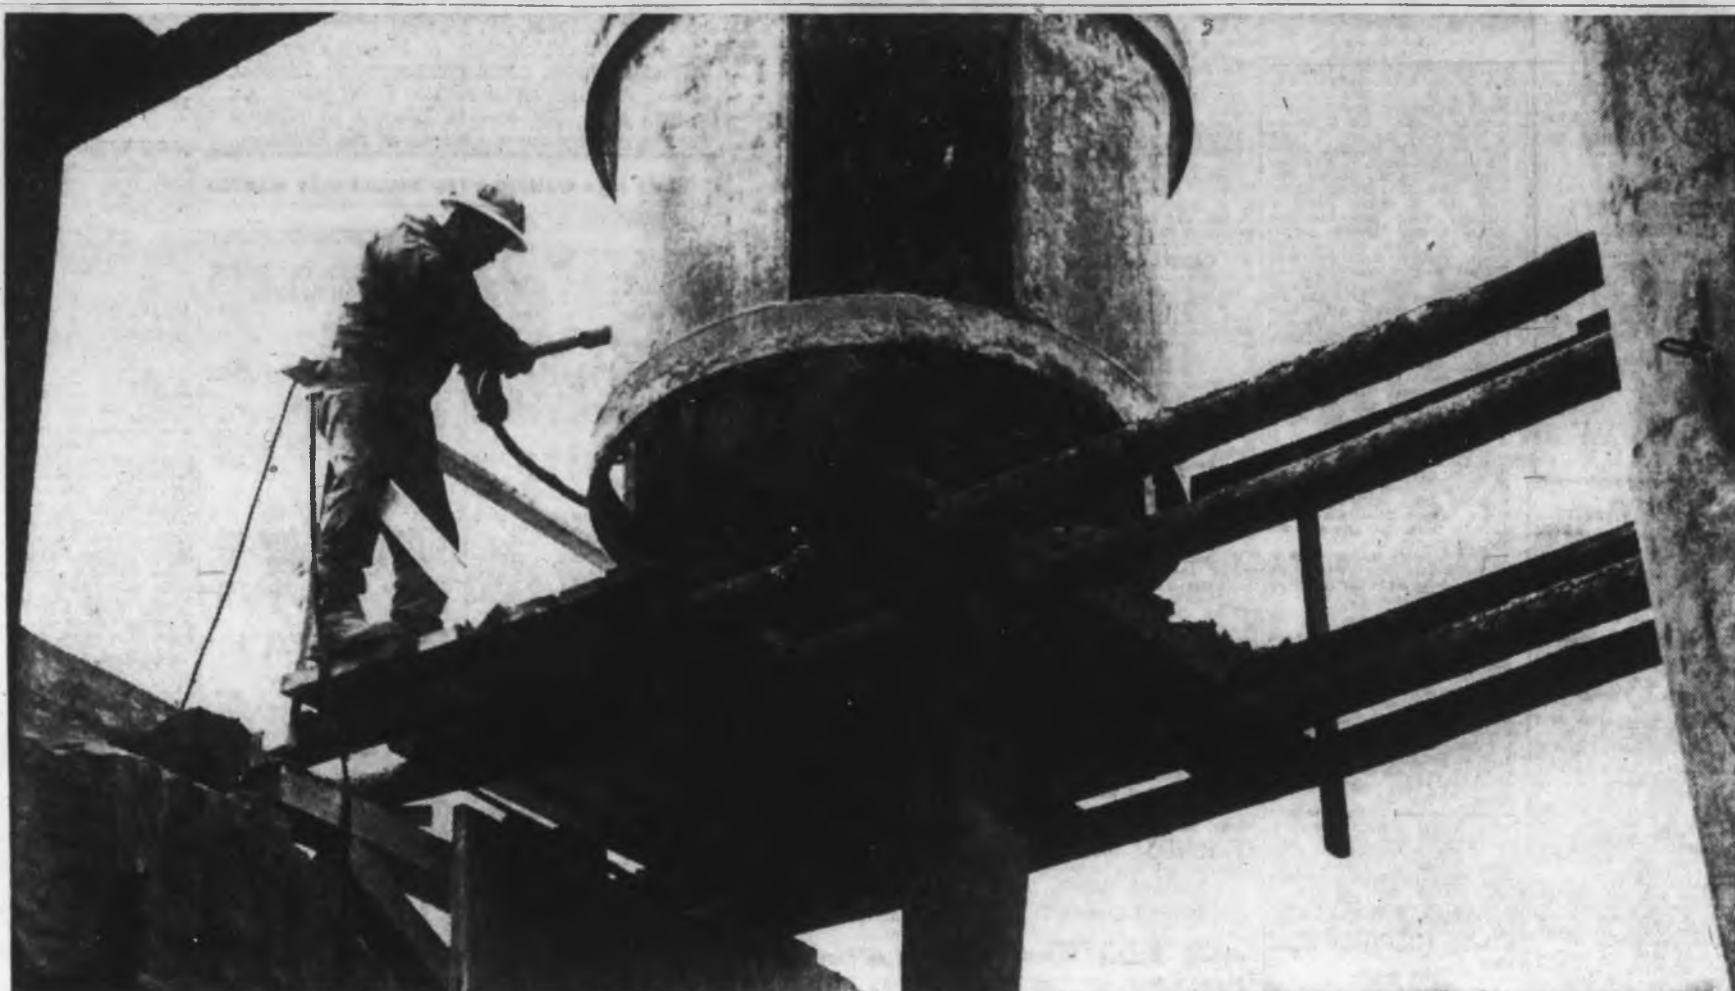

Some gins have rather strong flavouring. Others are utterly tasteless. Gilbey's London Dry has a perfect balance for the classic dry martini. A dry flavour that has been the international favourite since 1873. Quite a long time.

Since its invention the dry martini has always been graced with an olive. Very proper with the pit left in. Stuffed olives are acceptable, too.

GOP Will Never Be Same

By RICHARD WILSON

SAN FRANCISCO — Winds of change have shaken the Republican party. It will never be the same again.

Personalities who have dominated it for 30 years and more and who, on the whole, have tried to hold it to the middle course, are gone, forgotten or merely symbolic relics of a former time.

Nothing illustrates this more than a little reflection on who would be secretary of state in a Goldwater administration. Who would be secretary of defence? Who would be the chief advisers in a Goldwater-occu-pled White House? Or, in a Scranton administration for that matter? Scranton is so new as to be "virtually unknown in the GOP organization. "I hardly know Bill," Senator Everett Dirksen once said.

The truth is that the country

as a whole "hardly knows" anybody in the Goldwater organization, either. There are a few whose names have become known — Governor Fannin of New Mexico; Denison Kitchel, the campaign manager; a hot-eyed and hard-headed 40-year-old Harvard man named Richard Kleindienst;

Dean Burch, 36-year-old Goldwater executive assistant; Clifton White, 45-year-old former college professor.

Also there are a few journalists: Bill Buckley, the fast-talking editor of the National Review; Russell Kirk, conservative lecturer and writer; Mike Bernstein, Bill Seward and other congressional investigation types; Ed Nellor, former newspaperman and the-time employee of radio-caster Fulton Lewis; Tony Smith, former newspaperman; Brent Bozell, one-time ghost-writer for the

BARRY WINS FINAL TESTS

SAN FRANCISCO (CP)—The right-wing forces of Senator Barry Goldwater easily crushed all five attempts by supporters of Governor William Scranton to water down the pro-Goldwater Republican Party platform in a convention floor battle and adopted it without change early today.

Thus the stage was set for the nomination of Goldwater, the Arizona conservative, as the Republican party's candidate for president in the national convention balloting scheduled tonight.

Four of the proposals to change the platform were pushed by Scranton and his backers and were rejected by the convention delegates Tuesday night.

The fifth, which would have called for state, local and private action in behalf of civil rights, was offered by Governor George Romney and other Michigan delegates.

Two others dealt with what sponsors called political extem-ism, one to revise the civil rights plank and one saying the president must continue to have sole control of nuclear weapons.

The first two amendments submitted to the convention, denouncing extremism, were defeated by decisive standing votes.

Delegates roared their disapproval of a proposal to hammer into the platform a plank to repudiate "the efforts of irresponsible extremist groups, such as the Communists, the Ku Klux Klan, the John Birch Society and others."

The third amendment, dealing with civil rights, was beaten in the convention's first roll call by a vote of 897 to 409.

Onto Scrap Pile

The Republicans wrangled on and then deposited another plank from the Scranton people on the scrap pile. This one would have reaffirmed the precept of civilian control over the military and declared that only the president has the power to loose America's nuclear weapons.

A second civil rights amendment emphasizing state, local and private action to eliminate discrimination went down to voice vote defeat also.

And then the platform itself was adopted swiftly and unchanged.

Before the amendments to the party platform were introduced, several disturbances broke out in the Cow Palace, including the ejection of John Chancellor, a reporter for NBC-TV, who was escorted by police from the convention floor.

The incident occurred when the convention chairman ordered the aisles cleared. Chancellor, equipped with a walkie-talkie unit, put up an argument and broadcast a running commentary while being evicted. He was allowed to return shortly afterwards on orders from higher officials.

In a test of strength at the first session Monday, the Scranton forces were overwhelmed on a voice vote by backers of Goldwater on an issue arising from the seating of delegates.

And by what sounded like unanimous voice votes at the opening of Tuesday night's session, the delegates approved the reports of the credentials and rules committees. This clinched the preliminary victory won Monday by Goldwater forces.

Overwhelming

The rules committee issue arose from a complaint that the Tennessee delegation did not this year seat a Negro, who had in the past been a perennial delegate. Scranton forces were swamped Monday when they tried to initiate a debate on the matter while the convention had before it a motion that the rules committee follow the rules used in the 1960 convention.

Tensions continued to increase between the party's moderates and conservatives as the backers of Goldwater demanded Scranton apologize for a letter he sent the senator—demanding a showdown debate and accusing Goldwater of harboring "a whole crazy-quilt collection of

Chaos Reigns In Cow Palace

Victoria lawyer Brian Smith is in San Francisco to attend the Republican national convention as an observer for the Young Conservatives of Canada. This is how he sees the convention.

By BRIAN SMITH

Monday the convention opened at the Cow Palace—an enormous hangar about three times the size of the Victoria arena.

The main floor of the Cow Palace acts as a crude parliamentary floor for the convention. Facing the elevated rostrum are the rows of seats for the 1,308 voting delegates arranged in blocs under their state banners.

This convention floor area looks like a gigantic stock exchange. Delegates and alternates roam between state delegations, read newspapers, or carry on their individual press conferences.

We could look down from our seats in the gallery tonight and see Jackie Robinson arguing with Louisiana delegates. On another part of the floor, Barry Goldwater Jr. was vainly trying to elude an ABC television cameraman.

A group of Puerto Rican delegates was trying to hoist its banner in front of television cameras and there was at least one camera casualty when two newsmen crossed cables and collided. All the time this is going on, governors, congressmen and lists of routine speakers drone away to an unlistening audience.

I am sure that the press representatives here and their legion of technical assistants must outnumber the delegates and the press has been given almost as much space on the Cow Palace floor as the delegates. The three major American television networks have enormous operation units at the Cow Palace and provide lounge areas for delegates.

We have seen Huntley and Brinkley wandering about and we noticed George Gobel on display at the Xerox Centre where he appears to be advertising copying machines.

Our own CBC has a small but talented operation in a cubby hole at the Cow Palace which is ably-manned by James Minifie and Knowlton Nash. The CBC people have been kind to us.

The American convention is a parliamentary-type body which meets only once in four years for a period of one week.

This means that delegate continuity between conventions is not great.

In our country most national party conventions are held annually or every two years so that a group of perpetual delegates can more easily dominate the convention.

These convention differences between our two countries help to explain why the Goldwater forces have been able to win such full control of this convention in a period of four years.

The old eastern Republican forces, so long in control at these conventions, are today, a dispirited minority.

Tuesday night's session of the convention has given us General Eisenhower, who delivered a plea for party unity which aggravated no

Top-Level Soviet Shuffle Sees Brezhnev Moving Up

MOSCOW (AP)—First Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan will soon replace Leonid I. Brezhnev as Soviet president, informed Soviet sources said Tuesday.

Brezhnev, a likely successor to Premier Khrushchev, was reported being relieved of the ceremonial title of president so he can concentrate on his key jobs in the Communist party, the source of power.

PRESIDENT SOON

Mikoyan, an old Bolshevik high in the party and government since early in the Stalin era and now a confidant of Khrushchev, will become president in the next few days, the informants added.

The sources said the changes will be announced within the next few days at a joint session of the Supreme Soviet, the country's parliament, now in summer session in the Kremlin.

KEPTICISM

Another report, received with more scepticism, said Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko will be replaced this autumn by Alexei Adzhubei, Khrushchev's 40-year-old son-in-law who is editor of the government newspaper Izvestia.

Mikoyan, 68, Khrushchev's travelling troubleshooter, has asked for easier work than his present position as a first deputy premier, one well-informed diplomat said.

TOO BUSY

Brezhnev, 57, has been too busy lately to attend to many of the protocol requirements of his presidential role.

But the large, solidly built Communist has been very busy with party affairs. He is both a member of the presidium of the party, which guides it, and a secretary of the party's central committee.

HEIR APPARENT

Brezhnev now is widely assumed to be the heir apparent of the 70-year-old Khrushchev. But some observers do not overlook the name of Nikolai V. Podgorny, who also became a party secretary in June, 1963, or the possibility that an outsider might emerge.

Somewhat aloof-looking and a metallurgist by profession, Brezhnev has a common touch but lacks the folksy friendliness of Khrushchev.

Paul Takes Buttering-Up with Salt

Fan Club Across the Aisle

OTTAWA (CP) — Would Paul Martin have made a better prime minister than Lester Pearson, the man who beat him for the Liberal leadership in 1958?

The Progressive Conservatives seem to think he would. Twice they have tossed him verbal bouquets this week for his handling of the job of acting prime minister in the absence of Mr. Pearson at the Commonwealth conference.

Mr. Martin has accepted the words as doubtful compliments, unsought if not unappreciated.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker gave Mr. Martin the first bouquet when the government brought in its student loans legislation under an agreement with opposition parties to forego the opening debate. (See story on Page 3.)

"I must say that since the secretary of state for external affairs has been acting prime minister, as a result of his attitude there has been a remarkable improvement in reactions generally," Mr. Diefenbaker remarked in the Commons.

Conservative House Leader Gordon Churchill followed this up Tuesday by asking Mr. Martin:

"In view of his steadily increasing authority in the absence of the prime minister, would he use his influence now to have the main (spending) estimates brought before the House for examination?"

By this time, Mr. Martin seemed to think the game had gone far enough. To Mr. Churchill, he said:

"My honorable friend was good enough and generous enough to pay me a left-handed compliment. But he will not misunderstand me if I say that the authority of whoever is presiding over this House as acting prime minister is, of course, second to that of the prime minister who is now engaged in very important business outside the country."

"I want to make it clear that his authority has been properly asserted, and, I am sure, widely respected."
